Every intelligent American is interested in the Constitution of the United States, as he is interested in the foundation of his house.

No matter how well one may think he knows the Constitution, its value and power, he will do well to read "Constitutionism, the Origin of Liberty Under the Constitution."

This book by James Mussatti, former professor of history at the University of Southern California, is published by the Richard Blank Publishing Co., of Los Angeles, Cal.

A review of the book will be published in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Here is real political news. Dr. F. E. Townsend, who invented the old-age pension plan, with $200 a month for everybody sixty years old, says he'll have a presidential candidate of his own for 1936.

"We can lick both parties hands down," is his way of putting it. Dr. Townsend says he is tired of being "belittled"; he has 30,000,000 men and women who signed petitions asking Congress to pass his bill, his 30,000,000 are all voters. "and if politicians do not think this constitutes a definite threat to the traditional parties, they ought to brush up on politics."

Dr. Townsend says, concerning candidates:

"We'll take anybody, although we draw the line at Communism."

The $200-a-month candidate will be announced at a national convention next summer and before the campaign is over that candidate may worry the Democratic party as much as Senator Huey Long could have worried it, had he lived. Two hundred dollars a month is a good deal of money.

England hoped that the League of Nations might really do useful work and united, 52 against one, to force Italy out of Ethiopia.... Then the plan failed, partly because France wanted no war in Europe, and probably told England that, if war came, England would have to take care of herself and learn, all alone, what airplanes could do to battleships and cities. So a peace plan was suggested, that included carving up Ethiopia.

Haile Selassie complained that the "peace" proposition would give half or two-thirds of Ethiopia to Italy NOW, European nations reserving the right to take the rest for Italy or themselves later. That appeals feebly to Haile Selassie, as a "peace plan."

Different minds inhabit different skulls; environment has much to do with the difference, heredity has more. John Lawrence Collins, who killed a man last June and will die in the electric chair next January, born in New Orleans, did not know who his father and mother were, "Did not care." Two days ago he married a girl "because she was going to have a baby," but said "he didn't care whether he married the girl or not."

The judge sentenced him to death, Collins smiled, said "No," when asked if he had anything to say. When he started for Sing Sing prison to wait for the death chair, he walked with a "jaunty, buoyant step," waved a manacled hand from the automobile window.

That is all about him. How different from Wolfe, drifting down under the heights in Quebec, reciting Gray's "Elegy in a Country Churchyard."

Canada's minister of justice, Ernest La Pointe, refuses the last appeal of Mrs. Tyrrell Tilford, 58, convicted of killing her husband with poison. If nothing happens to disturb the "smooth course of justice," Mrs. Tilford will be hanged by the neck until she is dead next Tuesday. She may deserve it, although only the Angel Gabriel knows about that, but nine children born to her do not deserve it.

Mrs. Tilford will be the second woman hanged in Canada in 62 years, two too many.

The automobile industry is "rejoicing in its strength," and that means general improvement. Mr. Hudlow of Flint, Mich., makes automobiles and announces that during the last three months the number of his employes has averaged 13,568 against 6962 for the same period a year ago.

His payrolls are highest since 1929; his employes were paid during the three months mentioned a total of $6,371,727 against $2,501,453 for the same period last year, an increase of 156.4 per cent. Such figures mean "better times."

CITIES, TOWNS BESIEGED FOR FOOD ORDERS

Fresh sore spots in the State WPA snarl broke out in the Merrimack Valley today as hundreds of workers throughout the Commonwealth were still unpaid.

In Haverhill, Mayor George E. Dalrymple scored the local WPA as a "complete failure" and denounced control by Federal bosses as the "most outrageous thing ever foisted on the people."

More than 500 workers there failed to receive their bi-monthly pay checks yesterday. Many thronged City Hall today seeking food orders.

CHECKED FROM SALEM

In Lawrence, WPA Administrator Cornelius J. Casey declared he had received only 80 pay checks today in place of the expected 2000.

He pointed out that Lawrence time cards must be sent first to Salem, checked at Boston, returned

EX-BOOTLEG BAND BLAMED IN ROBBERY

BULLETIN

A drastic roundup of all suspicious persons in Boston was ordered this afternoon by Police Commissioner Eugene M. McSweeney in an effort to arrest the five bandits who staged last night's holdup in Federal street.

"G-men" today joined Boston police and Railway Express Agency private detectives in an attempt to run down the gang of bandits who held up a truck in Federal street and robbed it of two safes, believed to contain up to $3500.

Department of Justice operatives entered the investigation as it was learned members of the gang under suspicion have connections in New York and the Mid-West.

Their activities have extended beyond the borders of New England on many occasions, authorities said.

At this triple investigation got underway Boston police officials turned loose squads of investigators to search public and private garages, abandoned buildings, barns, and other places in South Boston for the automobile in which the bandits escaped.

As the getaway car headed for

Tree Falls On El Car, 3 Hurt

Three women were injured and more than 50 other passengers in an inbound Boston Elevated street car were severely shaken up today in a freak accident on Meridian street, East Boston.

When a truck, driven by Edward Coe, of Huntington street, Hartford, Ct., skidded into an old tree in front of 394 Meridian street, the tree snapped at the base.

It demolished the front of the truck and crashed against the side of the street car.

Coe was unhurt.

The injured women were Anna Fay of Russell street, Cambridge; Fannie Gordon of Orange street, Chelsea, and Mildred Murray of Bellingham street, Chelsea.

The street car, bound from Chelsea for Boston, was operated by Albert Jacoba.

Man Drops Dead In Quincy Court

Louis Freedman, 40, of Crawford street, Roxbury, died today in Quincy court a few minutes before he was to take the stand as a witness for his son Joseph Freedman in a civil suit.

Freedman was sitting among the spectators waiting to be called when was suddenly stricken. Attendants carried him to the corridor where first aid treatment was given.

When he failed to revive he was removed to Quincy City hospital where he was pronounced dead.

His son, who was on the witness stand at the time of the collapse, finished his testimony and arrived at the hospital to find his father dead.

The son said that his father was to have left for Florida tomorrow to spend the winter.

BRITAIN ASKS HITLER SIGN AIR PACT

London, Dec. 14 (AP)—The British government was disclosed today as exerting diplomatic influence:

Toward a closer relationship with the government of Reichsfuehrer Hitler of Germany;

Toward Emperor Haile Selassie, to induce Ethiopia to accept the Franco-British peace formula;

Toward Premier Mussolini, to induce him to agree to the formula under penalty of an oil embargo against Italy.

The first trend was shown by a conversation in Berlin between Hitler and Sir Eric Phipps, the British ambassador, over the possibility of resurrecting the plan for a Pan-European aviation alliance.

The second and third wer disclosed in a foreign office "white paper" which showed Sir Robert Barton, the British minister in Addis Ababa, had been ordered to use his "utmost influence" with the Emperor, while Sir Eric Drummond, the British ambassador in Rome, was instructed to tell Mussolini the plan for oil sanctions might be suspended.

PRESSURE ON MUSSOLINI

Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary, ordered Drummond to tell Mussolini of the peace formula, and instructed him:

PAULINO UZCUDUN JOE LOUIS

There is always a first time, and there is no denying the fists of Joe Louis, the Brown Bomber from Detroit. So here is Paulino Uzcudun flattened for the first time in his career, while Joe Louis, now the "Skull Crusher," calmly stalks away after dropping the Basque in the fourth round of their bout at the New York Garden last night. Paulino got up, but another punch almost ripped his head loose from his shoulders, and so Referee Donovan stopped the abbreviated slaughter. (For stories of fight see Page 11.)

'Ski-Girl' Conner Sent to Hospital

Framingham, Dec. 14 (INS)—On recommendation of two physicians, William Ernest Conner, 55, New York consulting engineer, who three years ago figured in the strange Canadian "ski girl" love triangle, today was committed to Westboro State Hospital for observation.

He had pleaded guilty in district court to charges of larceny by bogus check.

Name Roosevelt And Reed Will Bolt

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Dec. 14 (AP)—Former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, long a Democratic party leader, asserted today that if President Roosevelt is renominated he "is prepared to vote for the Republican candidate, provided that nominee is pledged to stand by the Constitution."

He refused to say who might be acceptable to him as the Republican candidate.

DYING OF PLUNGE ON WEDDING DAY

Seven hours before he was to have married Sarah Ferguson, of Queensberry street, Back Bay, John Kennedy, 29, of William Jackson avenue, Brighton, fell 20 feet down an elevator well and will probably die.

The accident occured when Kennedy called at the home of William McDonald, at 20 Hemenway street, a relative of the bride-to-be, to make final preparations for tonight's wedding ceremony.

Kennedy opened an automatic elevator door, and expecting to find the car there, stepped in. He plunged 20 feet, landing on his head at the bottom of the pit.

Kennedy was lifted unconscious from the elevator well by Hugh Ferguson, an uncle of the bride-to-be, and taken to the City Hospital.

At the hospital it was stated that Kennedy had suffered a fractured skull, broken left arm, broken ribs and internal injuries. Physicians said that his chances for recovery were slight.

Lawrence Dogs Muzzled 60 Days

Lawrence, Dec. 14 (AP)—All dogs in Lawrence were ordered muzzled or restrained today for 60 days by David J. Burke, director of public health.

The action was taken, Burke said, because of a report by the Board of Health that there had been nine cases of dog bites reported since one canine had been found to be suffering from rabies.

SOUTH BOSTON COMBED FOR 'HOT' BANDIT AUTO

South Boston and all roads out of the city were blocked within a few minutes after the robbery, the police believe the automobile did not leave the Peninsula district.

EX-BOOTLEG GANG

Police are convinced that the "job" was engineered by members of a South Boston gang whose bootlegging revenues had dropped to nil with the advent of legal liquor.

Detectives employed by Railway Express Agency were of the opinion the bandits thought they had made a haul of from $50,000 to $100,000 when they put the two safes, in full view of many bystanders, into the getaway car.

Detectives said they believe the robbers thought they were following a truck which had a large amount of money from Maine cities for deposit in Federal Reserve Bank, located within a block of where the holdup occurred.

INTERSTATE SHIPMENT

"The reason why G-men entered the case today was because investigation revealed some of the contents of the safes came from Troy, N. Y., thus making the shipment interstate.

In such cases federal detectives are assigned to help local and express agency sleuths.

The route taken by the robbed truck is the same as trucks en route to the Federal Reserve Bank use.

An official of the Express Agency said that on many nights many thousands of dollars are transported in the company's trucks, but that when a truck contains $10,000 or more another car follows it to give protection.

$3500 LOOT

Edward L. Woodman, superintendent of Railway Express Agency for Greater Boston said he believed the amount of loot taken would amount to not more than $3500.

Both the driver and the messenger who sat in the rear of the truck carried pistols, but they are not considered as official guards, it was said.

A witness who saw the machine used by the bandits in their escape roar across the Fort Point channel bridge toward South Boston was found by police.

Railway Express Company officials, quickly summoned to the scene by the three men on the truck, threw the resources of their organization in with Boston police in trailing the gunmen.

After questioning the driver, George Kuhn, of Dover street, South End, the messenger, George Barrett of Fayerweather street, Cambridge, and Harry E. Tripp, of Washington street, Abington, a clerk of the company, police dismissed the theory that gunmen had been imported to carry out the robbery.

SEDAN SWINGS OVER

The truck was on its way from the North Station to the South Station, where the two safes were to be placed in a vault overnight, when the bandits struck.

As it proceeded down Federal street a small sedan passed, swung toward the right curbing and then executed a sharp turn to the left. Backing up suddenly, straight out across the street, the sedan effectively blocked forward progress of the truck.

Kuhn jammed on the brenks and was about to yell at the driver of the sedan when two men stepped casually out of it.

One man carried a sawed off shotgun and the other a pistol.

Aiming the guns at Kuhn and Tripp, who were in the cab of the truck, the two bandits ordered them to get out.

"Come on, you," growled one of the gunmen. "throw up your hands. One false move and you'll get it."

THROWN INTO STREET

Kuhn and Tripp were stood alongside the truck, in a deep shadow, and suddenly another sedan, this one of expensive make, stopped behind the truck.

Three men all of them armed, leaped out of this second machine and two of them jumped over the tail board of the truck and pounced upon Barrett, the messenger.

Shocking him into a corner, the two holdup men picked up the safes, each of which weighed about 100 pounds, and threw them to the street.

Yelling to the pair who covered Kuhn and Tripp with their weapons, the other three men tossed the safes into the large sedan and after they were joined by their mates, roared down Federal street toward the South station.

In their flight one of the auto's doors swung open and struck the machine of Frederick E. Gotwall of East Second street, South Boston, who was accompanied by his wife.

IS OUTDISTANCED

Gotwall was one of several drivers who were forced to halt by the blockade of the truck and the smaller sedan.

Of the witnesses to the silent, sudden drama, only Gotwall had presence of mind to give chase to the fleeing bandits. He was outdistanced however.

The three victims of the holdup looked at Rogues gallery pictures for several hours, and police say they obtained promising leads.

Descriptions of two men, one living in Dorchester and the other in the South End were flashed from headquarters.

At the same time, an employe of the express agency was brought in for questioning, after it was found that he had been once arrested for larceny.

Police released him, however, when he proved that he knew nothing about the robbery.

Attempts by fingerprint experts to obtain a clue from the abandoned small sedan or the truck were unavailing.

Barrett, the messenger, started with the safes from Troy, N. Y., making 18 stops en route to the North Station. At each stop parcels were collected, as is the custom, and deposited in the safes.

With the delivery of the safes to the vault, Barrett's day's work is completed.

Each of the safes is plainly marked with the words "Railway Express Agency," and are about two feet square.

How Express Truck Robbery Was Staged in Federal Street

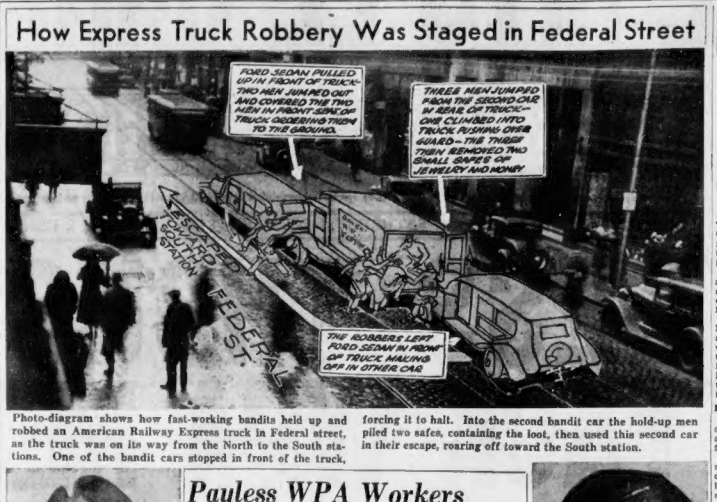

Photo-diagram shows how fast-working bandits held up and robbed an American Railway Express truck in Federal street, as the truck was on its way from the North to the South stations. One of the bandit cars stopped in front of the truck, forcing it to halt. Into the second bandit car the hold-up men piled two safes, containing the loot, then used this second car in their escape, roaring off toward the South station.

Payless WPA Workers Assail Red Tape Delay to Salem, and then finally checked from there to Lawrence.

Additional confusion broke out at the Boston WPA office today when the 125 members of the Boston ERA Civic Opera Chorus and Orchestra gathered at WPA headquarters, Park Square Building, to protest the dissolution of the project.

According to a letter received from Administrator Arthur G. Rotch the group, which has played to capacity audiences throughout the state, will be disbanded Wednesday.

It was indicated that the musicians might be absorbed into smaller ensembles.

As 1200 WPA workers continued payless today in Lynn, a repetition of yesterday's march on City Hall was expected. Local WPA officials admitted that only 250 checks had as yet been received from Salem.

Food orders distributed to the workers yesterday cost the city over $7500, according to Mayor J. Fred Manning.

Meanwhile, in Quincy 300 women and 100 men WPA workers were still without pay checks. At WPA headquarters there it was announced it "was hoped" they would be paid next week.

STRIKE AVERTED

A strike was averted yesterday when 500 men WPA workers received checks.

Salem reported 800 WPA workers a week behind in their pay.

Both Chelsea and Revere reported 1000 WPA workers unpaid since November 25.

From Providence, R. I., came word that 1200 workers there were still on strike today protesting irregularity of payment and orders to make up lost time.

Framingham, Ashland and Holliston sent reports of two to five weeks behind in receiving WPA checks.

In Cambridge, non-payment of WPA workers for three weeks has cost the city $4000 a week for relief.

More than 1000 Lynn workers were given food orders yesterday when they marched on the office of Mayor Manning to learn why they had not been paid.

Similar troubles are reported in Scituate, Wakefield and other cities and towns.

WAITS WORD

Meanwhile, Governor Curley is awaiting word from PWA authorities on the Mattapan State Hospital project he forwarded to Administrator Rotch yesterday.

The project will furnish employment for 2700 Boston men for four months and 600 for an additional two months.

The governor also announced that the State had received $120,000 from the Federal Government to start construction of 12 miles of roads at the Bourne National Guard Camp site.

BRITAIN SEEKS AIR PACT

principle is favorable, the French and United Kingdom governments will immediately take the necessary steps in order that the Committee of Five (of the League of Nations) may be called together Dec. 12.

"In that case, the meeting of the committee might modify the object of the meeting of the Committee of Eighteen which is fixed for the same day."

The "object of the meeting" is to discuss the plan for barring oil from Italy.

As concerns the Anglo-German proposal Ambassador Phipps was assigned to take the initiative in Berlin in conference with Hitler.

SEEK 4-POWER PACT

Sir Eric's move followed closely on Hitler's reception of the French ambassador.

The news gave rise to various conjectures, including reports that Great Britain was taking the initiative to negotiate a four-power aviation pact.

There were indications that Sir Eric's visit was linked to direct reference made by Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary, to Anglo-German problems in his speech of Dec. 5 in the House of Commons.

At that time Sir Samuel stated that while the Italo-Ethiopian war continues, little was to be gained by resuming the negotiations for an air pact which the British government, earlier had asked Hitler to undertake.

Sir Samuel stated, however, the British government would be ready to seize any opportunity which offered itself for an aviation pact and the reduction of air armaments, which he claimed were more urgently needed than ever.

Berlin, Dec. 14 (AP)—It was officially announced today that Reichsfuehrer Hitler yesterday received the British ambassador for a discussion of European armaments.

'Soup'

Youngstown, O., Dec. 14 (AP)—Considerate safe-crackers who drilled holes in an oil company's safe last night, but apparently were unable to set off a charge of nitroglycerine, left a note on the safe reading:

"Beware. Don't try to open this safe. It's full of soup."

TWO ROCKLAND SUSPECTS HELD

Acting on a tip, police today took into custody two men on Glenn street, Dorchester, for questioning in connection with the $4200 raid on the Given Shoe Company in Rockland yesterday.

Convinced information could be obtained from the men which would lead to capture of the bandits, police booked them as suspicious persons to prevent their obtaining bail.

Five young women who were in the Given Shoe Company plant at the time of the holdup, including Miss Margaret Given, were brought to Station 11 to see the suspects.

They were ordered to a detachment from West Bridgewater State Police barracks, Chief George Copp of Rockland and Norwell State troopers.

Two salesmen representing firms in Cambridge, who saw the holdup, were questioned during the night, but could not identify any of the rogues gallery pictures.

Investigation also tended toward Providence, on the facts that the automobile carried Rhode Island plates and disappeared in the direction of the state line.

SLUG, ROB GAS STATION MAN

Worcester, Dec. 14—Three bandits slugged and kicked Samuel Goldman, 55, and looted his filling station in Northbridge early today of several hundred dollars.

Police declared the gang was the same as was being sought for a $70 holdup of a chain store last night.

Goldman's scalp was laid open, requiring 21 stitches at Whittinsville hospital.

BRITAIN, JAPAN STILL AT ODDS ON NAVIES

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

London, Dec. 14—Britain and Japan failed again today to reach agreement on the Japanese demand for a common upper limit of tonnage, which has deadlocked the five-power-naval conference.

Admiral Sir Ernle Chatfield, first sea lord and chief of naval staff, and Admiral Osami Nagano, leader of the Japanese delegation, conferred at length.

International News Service learned that the British argument against the common upper limit was based first on the contention that a considerable portion of the British fleet would remain in European waters, whatever the situation in the far east, owing to the unsettled European problem.

BRITAIN EXPLAINS

Therefore, the British claimed, naval parity with Japan would actually mean serious British inferiority in the Far East.

Secondly, Britain ecphasized her responsibilities—a large coast line convoys in time of war—entailed a larger fleet if she were to have equality of security.

Nagano replied Japan also has a long coastline and contended that owing to the speed of the modern warship the British fleet could mobolize in the Far East at short notice.

For these reasons he disagreed with the British view.

NIPPONESE FRIENDLESS

Japan is definitely friendless at the conference, her attempt to win French and Italian support by including them among the five countries that would have the "common upper limit" after she had excluded them the day before, failed utterly.

Japan also ruled out Soviet Russia and Germany, holding with the French that armies and air forces must be taken into consideration.

Japan's maneuvers only solidified opposition to the parity proposal.

Britain was taken aback by the suggestion that Italy should be given a navy as large as that of the United Kingdom. The British dominions, speaking through Viscount Monsell, put Japan into another dilemma when they asked them if each dominion would also receive naval parity.

Hope is still held that Admiral Nagano might be authorized to put forward more reasonable proposals, but the Japanese have given no indication that they might modify their proposals.

ITALIAN BOMB KILLS U. S. MAN IN ETHIOPIA

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Jijiga, Ethiopia, Dec. 14—Dr. Robert W. Hockman, 38, American missionary, was killed Thursday while examining an unexploded Italian bomb at Daggah Bur.

He leaves his widow, formerly Miss Winifred Thompson of Concord., O., and a month-old child. They are now at the American mission in Egypt.

Dr. Hockman came here early this month, en route to Egypt, to see his child for the first time, but Red Cross authorities persuaded him his services in Ogaden province were indispensable.

He made a hobby of studying bombs, and had removed the detonator and supervised the digging-out of a nine-foot deep unexploded projectile at Daggah Bur recently. The bomb had been dropped by Italian war planes in recent raids.

Dr. Hockman, formerly of

DR. R. W. HOCKMAN

Wheaton, Ill., was a United Presbyterian Missionary.

Before the war outbreak he inoculated thousands of native soldiers against typhoid, smallpox and cholera.

He established an American nurses' training school in Ethiopia. He left for the front in September, with the first medical unit.

Dr. Hockman was born in China, where his father, Dr. W. H. Hockman, now of Chicago, Ill., was a missionary 50 years, including the period of the boxer rebellion.

Some Delegates Fear Collapse of League

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Geneva, Dec. 14—The campaign of peace in East Africa appeared developing today into a struggle over the Franco-British settlement plan, its advocates believing Italy—in the interests of European peace—must be given an economic outlet in Ethiopia.

Against them were posed the arguments of those convinced that any concessions to Premier Mussolini, to call off his adjudged aggression in Ethiopia, might imply the doom of the League of Nations.

Minutes Seemed Like Years; Bandit Victim Feared Guns

In a trembling voice, and near collapse from excitement, Harry E. Tripp, 54, of Washington street, Abington, gave the Boston Evening American his story of the holdup.

Tripp, employed by the express company at the North Station, rides every evening on a company truck to the South Station to get his train. He was seated on the front seat when the truck was held up.

"The following minutes seemed like years," he said. "I didn't know what minute I was going to be shot.

"I was on the front seat with Kuhn as we were proceeding from the North to the South Station. As we turned into Federal street, I saw a car shoot past and swerve to the left, and suddenly back right in the path of our truck.

AVOIDS COLLISION

"Kuhn slammed on his brakes, bringing the truck to a halt and avoiding a collision with the machine. I felt that something was wrong, and suddenly, almost simultaneously with the halting of the truck, two men leaped from the machine.

"They rushed to the front of the truck, and one of the men gruffly ordered:

"'Throw up your hands—get down off there. Make one false move and we'll blow out your brains!'

"Both men were at the side of the truck where I was seated.

HELD AT GUNPOINT

"We both got off the truck. With my back to the truck, and facing a building on Federal street, I was held there at gunpoint. The next thing I knew Kuhn was beside me. I glanced at him quickly and the sawed-off shotgun bandit said:

"'What did I tell you—Keep your —— eyes on the front of that building.' Boy, those minutes seemed like hours. I didn't know what minute I might be shot.

"The men remained at our side. It was then that I heard a commotion in the rear of the truck.

FEARED HIM SHOT

"Just before we were ordered off the truck I heard Barrett ask: 'What's holding us up? Get going.' He didn't know at that time that there was a holdup.

"But he soon found out. I heard a voice of a man in the rear, whom I could not see, say: 'Give it to him, push him into the pile.'

"I nearly died when I heard a crash. I thought Barret had been shot. It was when the two safes were kicked into the street that the crash occurred, and I heard a voice say: 'Get it in there, we can break it later!'

JUMP INTO CAR

"Finally the two men guarding us said: 'O. K., Bud?'

"'Make it fast,' the reply came back.

Masaryk, Czech President Resigns

Prague, Dec. 14 (INS)—Thomas Garrigue Masaryk, 85, founder and first president of the Czechoslovakian Republic, today resigned from the office he held continuously since November 14, 1918.

Two minutes before the presidential flag was lowered, Masaryk appeared on the balcony and spoke briefly to the palace guards.

Leaning from the balcony, Masaryk declared the executive burden should be borne on the shoulders of a younger man, foreseeing the election of Eduard Benes as president, the white-haired patriot said his last official act had been the signing of a decree of political amnesty.

The speech was universally considered to be his political testament.

Masaryk, a professor of philosophy in private life, has gradually become paralyzed in his right side, and it is understood that he was unable to sign his resignation decree with his right hand.

Egyptian Cabinet Votes Penalty Against Italy

Geneva, Dec. 14 (AP)—The Egyptian cabinet, emphasizing that Egypt was a signatory to the Kellogg-Briand pact, outlawing war as an instrument of national policy, informed the League of Nations today Egypt adhered to sanctions against Italy because it wished to maintain the integrity of nations.

Number 13 Has No Terrors

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Here's one girl baby for whom the "jinx" number, 13, has no terrors at all. She's the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Flory Grasso of Endicott avenue, Beachmont; she was born yesterday on Friday, the 13th, and she weighed, at birth, exactly 13 pounds. Her name will be Lucy. Nurse Mary LeBlanc is taking care of her.

Uses Zipper On Patient's Stomach

Chicago, Dec. 14 (INS)—Use of an ordinary zipper to permit the opening and closing of an incision for day-by-day surgical treatment of a cancer in the stomach today was revealed by Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Fishbein said the revolutionary experiment is being made by a Chicago surgeon, but refused to disclose the name of the doctor or patient on whom it has been used.

"While the type of treatment is not exactly new," Dr. Fishbein said, "the method of keeping the incision open is somewhat of a departure in surgical procedure.

"The surgeon first opened the abdominal wall and then opened the stomach. The stomach then was sewed to the opening in the abdominal wall. The zipper was fastened to the opening with adhesive tape. By keeping the zipper sterilized, there is little danger of infection."

CHURCH To Get 20 New PRINCES

CONSISTORY ON MONDAY

Rome, Dec. 14 (AP)—The purple, crimson and black robes of the papacy's highest dignitaries and humblest priests gave Rome heightened color today as the Vatican prepared for the great consistories of the coming week.

In the secret consistory Monday Pope Pius will create 20 new cardinals and deliver an allocution.

Thursday morning the Pope, surrounded by the brilliantly-robed and uniformed members of the Pontifical Court, will descend to St. Peter's basilica and in a public ceremony confer upon each of the new cardinals the red hat.

The new cardinals will give the Sacred College greater numerical strength than in many years.

When the 20 new princes don their red hats the college will number 69, one less than the total prescribed by canon law.

Italians Dominate

Italians once again will be well to the fore in the Sacred College. At present there are 24 Italians and 25 foreigners.

With the new appointments, there will be 38 Italians and 31 foreigners conforming with the tradition of a sizeable Italian majority.

Only cardinals and the Pontiff will be present at the secret consistory Monday. The 20 cardinals-elect will wait in their residences for a messenger to inform them of their elevation.

Theoretically, these cardinals have a voice in the election of their brothers. Ritual requires that His Holiness and his nominations with "Quid vis vidiure?" meaning "What is your opinion?"

Centuries ago cardinals might voice contrary opinions. Now they merely raise their hats in silent approval.

After creation of the cardinals the Pope will preconize, or propose, the confirmation of the new bishops and archbishops appointed since the last consistory, April 1, 1935. Among them are the Americans:

Monsigner Thomas McLoughlin, Auxiliary Bishop of Newark, N. J.; Monsignor George L. Leech, Auxiliary Bishop of Harrisburg; Monsigner Peter Ireton, Coadjutor Bishop of Richmond; Monsignor James H. Ryan, Bishop of Omaha, Neb.; Monsignor Louis J. Muench, Bishop of Fargo, N. D.; Monsigner Gerald B. O'Hara, Bishop of Savannah, Ga.; Monsignor Joseph C. Phalens, Bishop of Sault Ste. Marie and Marquette, Mich.

DARK Years in PRISON

BLIND SINGER GIVEN LIFE

In a sightless world of his own, Forrest K. Wells, convicted murderer, today was enveloped in solitary confinement at State Prison.

Late tonight he will be released from "solitary" and placed in a cell, and then will begin a life-long succession of grim prison days.

Wells was convicted by a Suffolk Superior Court jury of the second degree murder of his sweetheart, Miss Helen Martin, alias Helen Wells.

Judge Thomas J. Hammond immediately pronounced the life term mandatory under Massachusetts law.

Wells, unflinching, heard the jury foreman pronounce the words which doomed him "for the rest of his natural life."

A street singer and musician, Wells threw Miss Martin from the third story window of their room in a South End hotel last July 15.

After committing the act, he tossed her pet dog after her. Then he sat down and awaited the police.

He told police he killed the girl, who acted as his "eyes" while he entertained street crowds, because he didn't know what else to do.

After a year and a half of happiness together in cities from Columbus, O., to Boston, he said, their life together became unbearable.

MILLICENT ROGERS AGAIN BRIDE, N. Y. HEARS

MILLICENT ROGERS RAMOS

Millicent Rogers Bride, N. Y. Hears

New York, Dec. 14 (AP)—The Daily News said today that a dinner attended last night by Millicent Rogers Ramos, Standard Oil heiress, and Romney Balcom, wealthy young broker, was understood by hotel employes to have been a wedding celebration.

The paper said both Balcom and Mrs. Ramos smiled when asked if they had been married and refused to answer.

WIFE Dies in Auto TRAP

TWO MEN RESCUED

Danvers, Dec. 14—Her clothing tangled in the gear-shift lever of her husband's truck, which had plunged from Water street bridge into the Danvers river, Mrs. Amenda Bosse, 43, of Topsham, Me., was drowned early today.

Her husband, Ulysses Bosse, 42, and Patrick J. Roy, driver of the truck, both residents of Topsham, were rescued from the icy waters by police and firemen.

The three were driving through this town to Boston with a truckload of Christmas trees from Topsham when the heavy machine suddenly went out of control.

The two men are under treatment at Hunt Memorial Hospital for shock and immersion.

Cries of the two men awakened Mrs. Edward Melanson in her Water street home and she called police.

Fire Chief Joseph E. Kelly, former member of the Boston department, and Police Lieutenant Raymond Kerwin and Patrolmen Charles Blute and Allen Morgan volunteered to dive for the woman, when they extricated her from the cab of the truck she was rushed to the hospital, but doctors pronounced her dead.

Dedham Mourns Policeman Hero

Flags were flying at half staff today on all public buildings in Dedham in mourning for Robert G. Campbell, a retired police officer who died at his home today following a long illness.

He was a member of the Dedham police force retired a year ago due to injuries he received a few years ago while in the line of duty.

He made his home at Jersey street, Dedham; was a member of the Dedham American Legion post; served with the 55th Artillery overseas; member of the Dedham Police Relief Association, and member of the Constellation A. F. and A. M. Lodge.

Funeral services will be held from his home Monday. Burial will take place at Brookdale Cemetery, Dedham.

Cured

San Jose, Calif., Dec. 14 (AP)—Two robbers held up Ernest Stockton's service station today, but the only thing Stockton lost he didn't want anyway.

Unable to compel Stockton to tell where he hid the keys to the safe the gunmen left in disgust. "It cured my hiccoughs," Stockton told police.

Worcester Probes Dodge Auto Death

Worcester, Dec. 14—Investigation by police into the auto accident which cost the life of Rufus B. Dodge, 73, former mayor and prominent attorney, was continued today.

As yet, no charges have been placed against the dirver of the machine, Miss Barbara Gummere, 18, of Rittenhouse road, daughter of an insurance broker.

Doomed Convict's Bride Hopeful

New York, Dec. 14 (INS)—Anna Downey, a three days' bride, clung with hope today to the whispered promise of her husband, John Collins, 26, that he would join her, ere long, a free man.

Collins, married Tuesday in court to his childhood sweetheart, was sentenced yesterday to die in Sing Sing's electric chair the week of January 26, for the holdup-murder last June of Castro Theuner, Queens innkeeper. The bride sat in the court's anteroom, sobbing bitterly while sentence was pronounced.

Two Bandits Get $4000

Moncks Corner, S. C., Dec. 14 (AP)—Two bandits held up the Wiggins-Conner cash depository today and fled with approximately $4,000.

Fan Relief

Minneapolis, Dec. 14 (AP)—Police closed the night club where Fan Dancer Ruby Fey worked because, they said, she wore too few clothes. More modestly attired, she is now with a WPA vaudeville troupe, which will tour Minnesota's 87 CCC camps.

Standard Oil Co. Keeps 5-Day Week

Chicago, Dec. 14 (AP)—After giving the five-day week a trial in general offices, refinery offices and sales division headquarters since April 1, 1934, the Standard Oil Company of Indiana announced today it had worked out satisfactory and would be continued indefinitely.

Employes work 40 hours, the same number as they did under the five and a half day week.

Jewish Students Segregated

Warsaw, Dec. 14 (INS)—Climaxing a series of anti-Semitic riots in Poland recently and possibly indicating future segregation of Poland's Jewish and non-Jewish students, the rector of Lwow University today ordered that Jewish students occupy special restricted areas in class rooms.

In an effort to halt anti-Jewish disorders in the university, the rector, despite protests, assigned each Jewish student to a special, numbered seat. All Jews were placed on one side of the class rooms.

Five hundred Jews staged a demonstration against German ships in Warsaw, and police were called out to disperse them.

Meanwhile, discrimination and attacks against Jews continued throughout the Polish provinces.

Berlin, Dec. 14 (INS)—Anti-Semitic rioting was general in central Europe today, according to advices reaching Berlin.

The Balkans, in particular, were scenes of disturbances, with violent demonstrations reported in Rumania, Hungary and Yugoslavia.

Auto Kills Legless Man

Springfield, Dec. 14 (AP)—Henry King, 64, of this city, a legless cripple, died today in a hospital of injuries suffered last night when he was struck by an automobile.

Girl Shortage Promises Busy Evening for B. U. Portias

Due to the fact that there are only six feminine members of the senior class at Boston University law school, an acute girl shortage is looming as the time draws near for the class' annual dance, to be held this year at the Fox and Hounds Club on the evening of Tuesday, December 17. It looks like a busy time in prospect for available partners, and here are Virginia Briggs of Attleboro and Dorothy Golden of Cohasset explaining that they're sorry but they're already dated, although they just might have a place on their cards for a name or two more. Candidates for at least a one-step or a waltz are Guy V. Slade of Milton, Manuel Titlebaum of Dorchester, John O'Shaughnessy of Southbridge and Ottilio Giustina of Springfield.

THE GENTLEMAN THOUGHT WE WERE A Construction Company

We don't blame him. He lived down by the Mason-Dixon Line and it never crossed his mind that a department store would build some $100,000 worth of houses just to show its Public how simply its Public could do the same.

He had no way of knowing, either, that Jordan Marsh Company has been building for over eighty years—not houses, but confidence, a reputation for quality and dependability, a friendship with all New England.

And so when he came North to ask us for the name of the owner of the Winchester Home, in order that he might make an appointment to see it, we told him the story of the Home Development Plan and conducted his tour of all seven of the homes that already have received close to 100,000 visitors.

His enthusiasm (like that of all who have seen them) and the observation of renewed building activity in the vicinity of each of our seven Liveable Homes—has made "Jordan Marsh Company, Builders" particularly happy that in some small way it may have fostered and furthered New England's interest in home-owning—the first foundation after all, of building toward the future.

Real Christmas spirit is to prevail tomorrow night at the Brown Derby, which is presenting the second big benefit show in aid of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser Christmas Basket Fund.

The personnel and entertainment forces of the Arlington street night club, augmented by a large group of volunteer talent, are donating their efforts to help make some poor families happy on Christmas Day.

Here is a real contribution in answer to the thousands of appeals not only for Christmas baskets, but for anything—just something to lighten for one day at least the sadness and suffering in many homes at Christmas.

And what have YOU done to help?

Your Opportunity

If you have not made a contribution to the Christmas Basket Fund as yet, here is YOUR golden opportunity to make someone happy.

Here is a chance to provide food for some pitifully underfed child. Here is an opportunity to furnish clothing to warm shivering and weakened bodies. A chance to give some darkened home one day of deliverance on the year's most joyous holiday.

It is not too much. Many people think nothing of spending the evening in a night club for their own enjoyment.

Take tomorrow night off and go to the Brown Derby in Arlington street where Anthony Brando and his charming wife are host and hostess.

Biggest Show

You will see the biggest benefit show of the year. In addition to the regular Brown Derby floor show, lasting an hour, a corps of willing and talented volunteers will entertain.

There will be plenty of enjoyable entertainment but most pleasing should be the realization that you are helping others less fortunate.

Every person attending will be helping the Christmas Basket Fund just that much.

And the Christmas Basket Fund needs the help of every single individual who can afford enjoying Christmas. Immediate aid is essential.

Remember that there are only 11 more days before Christmas.

Remember that your contribution, however small, can help some poor unfortunate who would otherwise not share in the joy of the holiday.

Remember that your own Christmas will be a brighter one for that bit of giving.

And then, GIVE! DO IT NOW! !

Children Aid

The Christmas Basket Fund Editor is receiving 1500 letters a day from mothers of these children —praying for a Christmas Basket.

If the children of every Boston classroom would adopt ONE poor family and send in their pennies, nickles, dimes it would mean many more thousands of poor families could have a Christmas Basket.

Talk to your teacher. See what she says about the idea of having YOUR CLASS adopt a poor family.

Any amount collected and turned over to your teacher will be welcome at Christmas Basket Fund headquarters.

And Christmas Eve, when the baskets, filled with good things to eat, are delivered at thousands of poor homes the name of YOUR class and YOUR school will be placed in a basket. Just the other little "kids" will know whom they have to thank for one Merry Christmas dinner.

Harmonica Boys

Tomorrow night, in addition to the regular floor show at the Brown Derby, there will appear the "Sixteen G-Girls," under direction of Miss Gertrude Dolan of Roxbury; Eddie Kesselman and his 12 harmonica newsboys; Sonny Parker, who recently auditioned with Ben Bernie; Barbara May, blues singer.

The dance team of Renato and Rita; Virginia Stuart, acrobat; the "Society Steppers," Dolan, Mack and Dobson; Margaret O'Toole, pretty Roxbury dancer; the "Three Winter Sports," Dorothy Bell, Louise Totten and Jerry Marenghi; Babe Dempsey of the Duggan School of Dancing, Worcester, George MacFarlane of Hollywood, Cal., and many others.

Danny Duggan of the Duggan school will be master of ceremonies.

The dinner Sunday night will be priced at $2.50 at the Brown Derby.

Dinner will be from 8 until 10 p. m., the entertainment program will last from 10 o'clock until midnight and there will be dancing from midnight until 2 a. m. Monday, with Jimmy McHale's orchestra furnishing the music all through.

Arena Skating

"A Skater's Dream"—star feature of the Gala Skaters' Frolic of the Olympic Skating Club at Boston Arena—is another Christmas Basket Fund benefit. This will take place tonight from 8 o'clock until midnight.

Admission tickets, priced at only 40 cents, are on sale at Basket Fund headquarters, 294 Devonshire street. The telephone number is Liberty 4000.

Also for the benefit of the Christmas Basket Fund, proceeds above expenses at the fashionable Silver Slipper, 95 Munroe street, Lynn, next Monday night will be donated by Fred DeClerico and the management.

In addition to the regular floor show, the Silver Slipper Girls, Freddy Abbott, singer, and others, a number of state and city officials will be present. There will be a minimum charge of only $1 a person.

James Keating of the retail sales division of the Lincoln car division, Ford Motor Company, at 1001 Commonwealth avenue, Allston, communicated with the Christmas Basket Editor and donated the use of a Lincoln car for the basket distribution.

Each day there are approximately 1500 appeals for baskets received from needy persons, for scraps of warm clothing—for any kind of help that may ease the road.

BASKET APPLICATIONS MUST BE APPROVED

In order that Christmas Baskets may go only to deserving and needy families, each application must be approved by a priest, a minister, a rabbi, or charitable organization. If you wish to apply for a basket, therefore, get the signature of one of these persons.

A special effort to reach needy families not receiving city aid is requested.

Address all names and lists as well as contributions to the Christmas Basket Fund, Boston Evening American, 8 Winthrop square, Boston.

Give Toys as Tickets to Help "Poor Kids"

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

MARGARET STEWART ARCHIE DOYLE ELEANOR DURGIN

Not to save pennies for themselves but to help brighten Christmas for less fortunate boys and girls, these youthful movie patrons are giving a doll, a game and a drum as admission tickets at Loew's State theater. In the trio are Margaret Stewart, 11, of Jamaica Plain, Archie Doyle, 12, of Back Bay and Eleanor Durgin, nine, of Roxbury. By special offer of the theater management, all toys and food, accepted today instead of money, go to help fill Christmas baskets to be distributed by the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser.

It was a grand time at the Loew's State Theater this morning!

Nearly 2000 boys and girls stormed the portals of the Massachusetts avenue theater for the second annual Kiddie Show given in aid of the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American.

The youngsters howled at the mirth-provoking program which was presented to them. Our Gang Comedies, Silly Symphonies, Mickey Mouse cartoons and novelties.

The ticket for admission was a toy or canned food.

Rocking horses, guns, tennis rackets, games and canned food, from soup to nuts, made up the assortment.

Three carloads of food and toys were collected in all.

The toys are to be distributed to orphans and crippled children at the Sunday Advertiser-Daily Record Christmas party to be given December 23 in league with the Loew's theaters.

Among those attending this morning's show were a group of 400 boys and girls from the Home for Destitute Children and the Workings Boys Home, accompanied by Mrs. David Johnson.

The show was under the personal supervision of Samuel Gosnell, house manager and H. M. Addison, district manager.

CITY ACCUSES DOLAN AND 6

A bill of complaint today was filed with the clerk of the Supreme Court on behalf of Mayor Mansfield against Edmund L. Dolan, former city treasurer, and six other persons.

Corporation Counsel Henry E. Foley and former Assistant U. S. Attorney George R. Farnum, whose special investigations for the Finance Commission were once directed against Dolan, filed the bill.

The first two requests vary little from many another such complaint filed, asking that Dolan and the others be "made to report and disclose all gains and profits as benefits received from bond transfers with the city" and that they be required to render an accounting.

The third count, however, specifies that "it be ordered that they obtained their gains illegally and that Dolan obtained them in breach of his official duties to the city and that they pay back their gains with interest."

The petition further asks that the city be permitted to reserve the right to add "other names."

The six mentioned with Dolan are J. Walter Quinn, John F. Dever and Lawrence Costello, of Boston; Harold S. Simpson and Robert L. Emerson, of Brookline, and Frederick J. Reardon, of Cambridge.

Foley declared that service would be made on Dolan and the others mentioned in the bill at once. The return date will be the first Monday in January, he said.

The total "gain" alleged was $200,000 according to the bill.

There are 15 allegations, but they all tend toward charges which have been made repeatedly and in previous investigations.

Lynn's Silver Slipper Girls Help Fill Christmas Baskets

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Nobody will go hungry in Greater Boston this Christmas if these girl entertainers at the Silver Slipper, Lynn, can help it, and the benefit party in which they'll do their bit Monday night will swell the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser Basket Fund, assuring the answering of every appeal from the needy. Monday night's the time, remember. And the place is the Silver Slipper, Munroe street, Lynn. That'll be your opportunity to see more of Hazel Murray, Babe Gaffney, Evelyn Downey, Harris Sawyer and Mary Rooney, smiling at you here from left to right.

REDS' MEETING BROKEN UP BY GRID STAR

(This is the seventh in a series on the first anti-Communism school in America.)

By ALAN C. FRAZER

Copyright, 1935, by the Boston Evening American

Philadelphia, Dec. 14—A Communist rally was broken up this week by Stanley Mancauskas, captain-elect of the football team at St. Joseph's College, whose Jesuit professors have launched the first anti-Communist school in America.

Like the other students at St. Joseph's, Mancauskas has been debating Communism in the college debating society, listening to papers on radical activities, read of historical society meetings and has learned of the axioms of the "Reds" from his teachers in various classes.

Accompanied by Monert Orszcko, another student, he went to a meeting of the Wool Pullers Union in a hall in Edgemont street in the Port Richmond section, where he found Communists staging a rally.

No American Flag

"They were putting on a puppet show for the entertainment of the members of the union and had red flags all around the platform, but not a single American flag," he said.

"They were singing songs and in fact it was their singing of a parody on "The Man on the Flying Trapeze," with words deriding America, that attracted us into the place.

"They were also deriding Father Charles E. Coughlin of Detroit, the famous radio priest, in their songs.

"Well, we went right into the hall and heard a speaker tell the audience that the only system of government that was worth anything was in Russia, where, he said, the proletariat rules.

"Then they started talking about Father Coughlin and silver and I just stood right up and told the speaker he was faking and couldn't prove what he was saying.

Graduate Reds

"That bothered him and he told me to sit down, because it wasn't an open forum, but I had to interrupt him again when he started his remarks again, and there was a lot of trouble and I guess we were pretty near a clash. There was no more speaking after that, because for two hours we argued back and forth. It was a regular debate, pretty hot at times.

"There were seven Communists in the party, two of them graduates of Penn State and another a teacher in the Communists Workers' School.

"The head man said our minds were poisoned and offered to send us some literature and he wanted to have an open meeting and added debate. That's the way they like to spread their doctrines.

"The Wool Pullers Union isn't radical but one of them invited the Communists there. They do the same thing in other halls—get themselves invited to 'entertain' at union meetings, and they have things arranged in connection with the hiring of the hall, so they won't be ordered out. They're wise to all the angles, but they didn't count on us that night."

Score Reds

Mancauskas is six feet tall and weighs 186 pounds and was well equipped, after a rugged football season, to enforce his arguments if turmoil developed.

All the students at St. Joseph's are fully acquainted with Communist activities, theories and aims from hearing lectures by the Rev. Timothy J. Coughlin and the Rev. Phillip H. Burkett, professors of history and sociology, and both of whom are instructors in the free public evening anti-Communism school. The college students are working on a one-act play attacking Communism, and a number of the seniors are writing about it in their theses.

THE SENATOR SAYS:

Santa Has Goodies For Tobin and Donovan

Sage's Sharp Ears Hear of Bench for One, Council Presidency for Other

THE SENATOR:

He sees all and knows all that's going on in Massachusetts politics and most of it he finds amusing or amazing, often both. Best of all, he tells about it.

Meet him below and listen in with him regularly in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

"How I happen to be in here so early," says The Senator, with a wry smile, "is that I am very hard pressed for it to put the duck on a few sly rumors."

THE SENATOR

"You are not here so early that I did not beat you down," retorts Timmy, giving a rag swipe to The Senator's chin and deftly removing a flicker of egg.

"I would rather that by far than your beating me up," says The Senator appreciatively, not forgetting to sip of his No. 5 Club Breakfast, which is very satisfying.

Timmy is very busy with his rag and The Senator is choosing between a last night's fishball and a sliver of pickle.

"I hear only this morning while I am in escrow," says The Senator, "that Dan Coakley of the Governor's Council has dug up an old law which gives the governor the right to remove Supreme Court justices."

"My own troubles," says Timmy with an absent look in his eyes, "has been more with the boys of the lower courts in the matter of slight indiscretions."

"Speaking of judges," says The Senator, "brings up a report that if the chance comes the governor will find a place on the bench somewhere for Johnnie Donovan, the attorney and writer."

Timmy is nodding.

"Roxbury boys both of them."

"They been friends," says The Senator, "since Jim was an alderman and John was a law student."

Timmy shakes his head agreeable.

"You are sure full," says Timmy, "with news of the greatest variety. Now I will tell you one about who will be the next president of the City Council."

The Senator spills his drink a little.

"Easy," he says, "it's Martin Tobin of the 15th ward. I will give you pointers, and they are that Martin has the backing of 11 promised votes so far, and with his own it makes 12. After a couple of usual complimentary ballots, the vote will go for Martin. You wait and see."

"I'll be here yet," grins Timmy, "if the landlord doesn't catch up with me."

The Senator muses again, but only slightly.

"Did I tell you," he queries, "about the new move to make the council on the hill more of Democrats?"

"Not at least recently," cracks Timmy.

"This is brand new," chides The Senator, completing the Club Breakfast No. 5, and wiping off all chins in a lone swipe. "This is a swing to put Charlie Fitzgerald of Dorchester in from the Second District."

"And Joe Grossman would get the old heave-ho," agrees Timmy.

"That would appear to be the lineup," says The Senator, "An eye for an eye and a Democrat for a Republican."

"Speaking of Democrats," says Timmy, "I hear only yesterday a rumor that Henry Sullivan of Southie, who has run twice for the school committee and stacked a good vote, will make a fight for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor."

The Senator grins:

"That is taking it for granted Joe Hurley don't want the job again and will go out for governor, either with or without the support of the June convention."

The Senator seems to hesitate and Timmy picks up the club breakfast glass suggestively. But with something on his mind, he waves his hand and suddenly says:

"I knew it; I knew it."

"Rah!" breathes Timmy so fragrantly that The Senator near keels over. "You knew what?"

"Them rumors I was going to put the duck to. I forget what they are."

(In tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser The Senator starts an entirely new discussion.)

LANDON'S COURAGE INSPIRES CITIZENS OF HOME STATE

With excessive costs of government devouring the people's substance, a few States—among them Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa and Indiana—are setting heartening examples in efficiency and economy.

Although no State has as yet dealt effectively with the burden of obsolete local units of government, there is nonetheless a lesson to be learned in the states mentioned.

To bring out the facts, a group of observers—Charles N. Wheeler, James T. Williams, Jr., and Merryle Stanley Rukeyser—have made a survey at the request of William Randolph Hearst. This is the fourth article in a series presenting the facts.

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.

Topeka, Kan., Dec. 14—Just in time to rebuke Americans of little faith, the people of Kansas, under the leadership of a chief executive "who puts the cause above renown," have kept the faith and vindicated anew the American system of government.

Under the leadership of this chief executive—Governor Landon to his fellow Americans of other States, Alf Landon to his fellow citizens of Kansas—the sturdy people of this typically American State have proved anew that self-help, forethought and frugality are all that James Russell Lowell said they were—"The very roots in personal character which nourish and sustain the trunk and branches of every vigorous commonwealth."

Under the leadership of Governor Landon, the people of Kansas have maintained a government during the hard times of recent years that has earned national distinction by living within its means, by cutting taxes and by reducing bonded debt without crippling the fundamental functions of the government of one of the sovereign States of the Union.

TAXES DRASTICALLY CUT

General property taxes in Kansas have been reduced more than 33 per cent since the peak year.

For the years of 1933-34 the cost of State government in Kansas was reduced 22 per cent below that of the years 1931-32.

Kansas counties and communities liquidated 22 million dollars worth of bonded indebtedness from 1932 to 1934.

During the same time new bonds were issued in the amount of five million dollars, half of which were for relief purposes. This left a net reduction of 17 million dollars in the bonded debt of Kansas counties and communities from 1932 to 1934.

Since 1929 the per capita cost of State and local government in Kansas has been reduced from $71 to approximately $43. This is a reduction of approximately $19 per capita, or more than 26 per cent.

Kansas People Proud of Record

This is a record in which the people of Kansas take genuine pride, and with good reason, because it reflects tremendous credit not only upon the character of the citizenship of Kansas but upon the leadership which the people of that State have raised up in a great emergency.

But there is far more to the record than budget-balancing, than the elimination of waste, than the cutting of governmental costs and the reduction of public debt.

Against a background of administrative success which this record reveals stands out in bold relief the character of the people of Kansas and the talent for leadership of their chief executive. Far more important than the money saved is the spirit of self-denial which made the saving possible and the high purpose that united the people of Kansas in their common effort.

They were not thinking so much about themselves, when they elected Governor Landon in 1932 and re-elected him in 1934 and supported his administration throughout in its firm resolve that the government of Kansas should not spend what it did not have.

Landon's Courage Inspires Whole State

They were thinking about the future, of the youth of Kansas and about the legacy of larger opportunity which they wished to leave to their children and their children's children.

This is why the leadership of Governor Landon today personifies to the people of Kansas a great cause.

They have found in him not only a man of principle and a practical progressive with a talent for administration.

They have also found in him a leader "who by the example of his own courage, vigor, certainty and steadfastness" has drawn out the highest qualities of the people of Kansas.

His resolute sense of duty has enabled the people of his own State to "brush opportunism aside."

(Another in this interesting series of articles will appear in an early edition of Boston Evening American).

Seek to Place Landon On Ballot in Ohio

Columbus, O., Dec. 14 (US)—Information as to requirements to place the name of Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas on the Ohio preferential ballots at the presidential primary election May 12, 1936, was asked here today by friends of the Kansas chief executive.

Secretary of State George Myers said he had been formally requested by a secretary of Harry M. Daugherty, attorney general in the Harding cabinet, to send a copy of the instructions to Governor Landon at Topeka.

Mayor Earns His "Tag"

(Pictures from International News Photograph Service)

P. A. O'CONNELL, MAYOR MANSFIELD

Today is "tag day" for the Will Rogers Memorial Fund, but solicitors calling at the office of Mayor Mansfield will find that he's stolen a march on them. Here he is, giving Fund Chairman P. A. O'Connell his personal check for $100.

Memory of Will Rogers Honored on Tag Day Here

Boston showed its love and respect for the memory of Will Rogers today by turning out whole-heartedly to make the Will Rogers "Tag Day" a success.

At the appointed hour, a cowboy impersonating Will Rogers rode in from Brookline, flanked by a 110th Cavalry guard of honor.

Amid the cheers of thousands the procession slowly wended its way up Beacon street to the Gardner Auditorium in the State House where the main events took place.

BUGLER SOUNDS CALL

A bugler from the WPA band was sent to the bandstand in the Common to notify those assembled there that due to the rain the exercises would be held at the Gardner Auditorium.

The guest of honor was Governor Curley, who was introduced by P. A. O'Connell, chairman of the Will Rogers memorial committee.

The Governor paid a glowing tribute to the cowboy philosopher. He outlined the purpose of the fund, the money of which is to be used for helping those who cannot help themselves — particularly crippled children. More than $2000 has already been collected here.

BAND CONCERT

A concert was given by the PWA band under the leadership of Bandleader D'Avigno.

Original plans for the day called for a flying machine demonstration of squadrons of airplanes under Commander Frank Hawks, but due to the uncertainty of the weather, this important feature of the day's entertainment was called off.

The women of the State Committee, of which Mrs. Frederick C. Smith is chairman, are accorded much of the credit for today's success. This committee included: Vice-Chairmen Mrs. William J. McDonald and Mrs. Edward Rugg; secretary, Mrs. Frederic Dowling.

5 Roxbury Stores Damaged by Fire

Fire starting from an undetermined cause in the basement of a tailor shop at 290 Hyde Park ave., Roxbury, virtually destroyed the shop, and damaged four others to the extent of $5000 today.

The tailoring establishment was operated by Joseph Rosecian. The other stores damaged were a drug store at 292 operated by Benjamin Clayman, a beauty shop at 288 run by Irene Gordon, a chain store at 286, and a Chinese laundry at 284 run by Ling Chee.

MYSTERY DEATH OF DORCHESTER VET PROBED

Dissatisfied with the conclusion that John J. Walsh, 45-year-old disabled veteran, met death as the result of a fall, Medical Examiner Timothy Leary today ordered an inquest.

According to police Walsh was found lying on Dakota street, Dorchester, and was brought directly to City Hospital, where it was found he had sustained a skull fracture. He died of the injury later.

Dr. Leary said:

"The fracture is not quite the usual type received in the usual fall, such as by tripping or plunging headlong."

"Most of the fracture was on the back of the skull.

"I am sending the case along to the court for an inquest."

Asked whether or not he would ask, or had asked, police to extend their investigations, Dr. Leary said that he gave the police his opinion before the investigation and that he presumed "they would continue to be able to present all the facts at the inquest."

Walsh lived at 23 Dakota street, Dorchester.

Relatives said that he should have had the money from a compensation check with him, and should have had the funds from an American Legion Post beano party which he had managed.

No money was found on him, however.

Eyeglasses, which searchers failed to find where Walsh was lying, were found there three days later, relatives said.

Quake Recorded

Cincinnati, Dec. 14 (AP)—Dr. Victor A. Stechschulte, seismologist at Xavier University, reported today recording of a "strong" earthquake probably centered near the Peruvian-Bolivian border in South America.

Where Truckman's Wife Drowned in Cab

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Trapped in the cab of this truck, half submerged in the Danvers river after a plunge from Water street bridge, Danvers, Mrs. Amenda Bosse of Topham was drowned today. Her husband, Ulysses Bosse, owner of the machine, was rescued, as was Patrick J. Roy, the driver, also of Topham.

Wild Is Tamed

Chicago, Dec. 14 (AP)—Stephen B. Creech, federal biological survey employe, saw a tavern sign advertising wild duck. That's out of season, so Creech bought a piece, ate part of it, put the rest in his pocket for evidence. Returning with a warrant, he went to the kitchen and found the "wild duck" had been carved from a tame goose.

80 Clerks Now Needed in Newton

A request for 80 temporary clerks to be employed for a period of three months or less in Newton City Hall was made today to the State Civil Service Commission by John W. Murphy, chairman of the Newton Board of Assessors. Wages for first year clerks are set at $15 a week.

Thar's Gold

Colorado Springs, Colo., Dec. 14 (AP)—There's gold in that street, thought Charles Schiele, veteran mining man as he watched WPA workers dig up abandoned street railway tracks and recalled rock from a Cripple Creek mine had been used in the paving years ago. He picked up a sample, which he said assayed .41 of an ounce, or $14.35 to a ton.

BRUNO TOLD DATE OF EXECUTION SET

new death date, set yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard. Hauptmann, Colonel Kimberling reported, said:

"I feel something will happen so I won't go to the chair."

GREETINGS UNCHANGED

The guard told Kimberling Hauptmann showed no noticeable change in his demeanor or expression when he heard the news. He thanked the guard, Kimberling said, and explained he had been "expecting the information almost any time."

Hauptmann had slept late this morning and had finished his breakfast, when the guard came to his cell about 11 a.m.

A short time later Hauptmann's spiritual adviser, the Rev. John Matthiesen, of Trenton, arrived to see him.

COOL AND COMPOSED

The clergyman's visit was short and when he left the prison he said he had found the prisoner cool and composed.

"He took it (the news) very composedly," he said. "He knew what was coming up. The news really made no impression on him. He is full of confidence in the fact that the State of New Jersey does not intend to permit a murder."

The clergyman said he and Hauptmann had prayed together briefly and then he left.

Col. Kimberling said Hauptmann "seems to have the feeling he'll get out of it. That's the impression I got from him."

STILL OPTIMISTIC

He was asked if he thought the condemned man's great optimism resulted from the nocturnal visit Governor Harold G. Hoffman paid to his cell in October.

"He had that optimism even before the governor saw him," Kimberling answered. "He has said several times to me that he doesn't expect to go to the chair. He feels something is going to break. He impresses me as feeling that way about it."

Prisoner Says Hoffman Promised Bruno Life

New York, Dec. 14 (AP)—The New York Evening Post today quoted a prisoner in the Trenton, New Jersey death house as saying Governor Hoffman of New Jersey had promised Bruno Richard Hauptmann he would not die in the chair for the murder of the Lindbergh baby.

The prisoner is Edward J. ("Sonny") McNamara, awaiting execution for a gangster murder last May 9. The condemned man, the newspaper related, reported the incident to a friend who visited him in the death house.

"You're wrong," the Evening Post quoted McNamara, answering the visitor's comment that Hauptmann was certain to be executed. Governor Hoffman was in here a short time ago to see Bruno and he gave him his word he would not die in the electric chair for the crime."

Violet Sharpe Suicide Laid to Indiscretions

New York, Dec. 14 (INS)—Violet Sharpe, maid in the home of Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, took her life, not because she had knowledge of the Lindbergh kidnaping, but because she was ashamed to re-tell details of four indiscretions of which she was guilty.

This was revealed today by the Evening Journal in a copyrighted story, presumably obtained from official sources, thus clearing up one of the most puzzling secondary mysteries of the famous case.

The Morrow maid was overcome by shame after being forced to tell of her indiscretions to New Jersey police authorities and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and rather than re-tell her amorous adventures she decided to take her life with poison, the newspaper sets forth.

MARRIED SECRETLY

The Journal's story pictures Violet as a flirtatious girl, who concealed a secret marriage and experienced extra-marital affairs, but who was innocent of any connection with the Lindbergh case.

The girl was the only employe of the Morrow home who, according to the authorities, was unable to furnish a "suitable alibi," and she was questioned twice in June, 1932, a month after Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.'s body was found.

At each questioning Col. Lindbergh was present.

The first time she was questioned, the newspaper declares, Violet Sharpe lied. She denied she had been out on the night of the kidnaping with two men and another girl.

The state police, it is said, were aware that she had been out; that she lied, and their suspicions naturally were aroused.

The second time she was questioned, she broke down and confessed that she had permitted four men to make love to her.

"Who were the men?" she was asked.

One of the men she named was an employe of the Morrow family and, the Journal points out, it was this part of the girl's story that reached the ears of Hauptmann's counsel who confused the Morrow employe with an employe of the Lindberghs and attempted to involve her in the kidnaping.

For a time it appeared that the girl's suicide was the solution to the Lindbergh case. But the state police continued doggedly to investigate Violet Sharpe's life long after she was in her grave, and from that investigation there came but one conclusion:

She was innocent of the Lindbergh crime.

Her companions on the night of March 1 provided her with an alibi that the defense could not shake.

After her death it was learned that she had been the wife of one George Paine, whom she married in England before coming to the Morrows. They were separated. This, too, she had tried to conceal, and, in so doing, had stirred the suspicions of her questioners.

Bruno's Loyal Wife Fights On in Her Despair

New York, Dec. 14 (INS)—"What can I do or say that can do any good?"

Those words today marked the despair of Mrs. Anna Hauptmann as the loyal wife tried to realize the full import of the sentencing of Bruno Richard Hauptmann to die during the week of January 13 for the murder of the Lindbergh baby.

Despair was in her heart, but there was no slackening in the steadfast determination which she has fought to save her husband since the very moment of his arrest.

"Of course we will go on fighting until the truth is found and told to everyone," she cried, her voice breaking.

"What is there to say? No, I have nothing, nothing at all to say. Go to Mr. Fisher (Hauptmann's attorney). He will tell you what we will do next."

Don Juan

Chicago, Dec. 14 (INS)—Gardiner Allison Stewart, 30, is a Don Juan ne plus ultra—by his own admission.

Arrested for bigamy, he told authorities:

"Sure, I've got two wives. And that isn't all. I've also got 1500 sweethearts. I used to keep a list of them, but it got so bulky I gave it up."

Stewart's first wife, Marie, 28, a diminutive blonde, said she discovered he spent his "off nights" with his second wife, Clarice, 18, a tall blonde.

JAFSIE'S 'ATHLETE'

Hockey Star Briber, He Says

John F. Condon, the famed "Jafsie" of the Lindbergh kidnaping case, today reiterated his claim that a "well known athlete" offered him $250,000 to retract his testimony in the Hauptman trial.

The athlete, who identified himself with professional hockey, Jafsie said, declared that $90,000 had already been collected toward the payment.

"The offer so nauseated me that I simply didn't pay any attention to it," Dr. Condon said.

"All I want is the $12,500 I spent of my own money during the course of the investigation and trial."

At the Hotel Edison, Lynn, where he is staying as "guest of the manager" of a Lynn theater, Jafsie willingly described the meeting with the "well known" athlete.

"My visitor said he was playing an active part in a contest at which he said I was spectator.

"But he couldn't have been very prominent, or I should probably have known him.

"He walked into my office in New York, made himself known and plunged directly into his infamous offer. Of course I made no effort to check up on him. He doesn't interest me.

Edith Maxwell TELLS HER OWN STORY

The life-history of the mountain girl school teacher whose case has stirred the whole country

ILLUSTRATED WITH EXCLUSIVE PHOTOGRAPHS

CONVICTED for the murder of her father when he allegedly threatened her with a butcher knife for staying out after 9 o'clock with a boy friend, Edith Maxwell, from her jail cell, now writes her own account of her life.

Descendant of pioneer Americans who were the original settlers in those remote Virginia mountains, Miss Maxwell describes the actual conditions of "hill-billy" existence. In a cool and logical analysis that is the opposite extreme of the furious rebellion she acknowledged against her father's reprimands, she describes events in her girlhood experiences which she believes played a part in the "horrible nightmare" of her father's death.

Watch for this girl's own story of her personal circumstances and fate, with their reflection of the lives of other "mountain children."

First of Junior Supper Dances Is Fashionable Affair

By BETTY ALDEN

THAT NO ONE can crash the sacred portals of the Junior Supper Dances is a foregone conclusion and, consequently, only the cream of Boston society were equipped with the coveted pasteboards which allowed them to gain admission to the Statler Ballroom, last evening, for the first of these assemblies . . . And it was also a foregone conclusion that practically everyone on the hand-picked list was present . . .

MRS. WILLIAM D. ENGLISH

Five members of the small committee which governs these dances were in the receiving line . . . Mrs. William C. Cox, Mrs. Amory Hollingsworth, Mrs. Philip Stockton, Mrs. S. Huntington Wolcott, Jr., and Mrs. William E. Ladd, who is the chairman of the committee . . .

A number of couples, whose weddings last June were among the year's outstanding social events, were present . . . Among them were Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Hovey (Anita Hinckley), Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Davis, Jr. (Nancy Whitman) and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Iselin, Jr. (Sally Curtis) . . . Another recent bridal couple there were Mr. and Mrs. Richard King Thorndike, Jr. (Lucy Rantoul), the latter wearing a cinnamon satin gown with pale apricot jewelled clips . . .

The popular "Sis" Hovey wore a voluminous gown of flame satin . . . Frances Proctor and Ellen de Normandie arrived together with a merry group which had dined at the latter's home . . . Frances was in pale yellow brocaded satin, and Ellen wore a modish gown of silvery blue metal cloth . . . Olivia Morgan and Alfred Hallowell, who undoubtedly will be Mr. and Mrs. before the first Supper Dance next winter, and Bettina Eshleman proudly dancing with her fiance, Franklin Reece, were among the prominent engaged couples present . . .

Outstanding among the sartorial effects were the dignified ermine cape with myriad little ermine tails all over it which Evelyn Hollingsworth wore . . . Mrs. Willis P. Beale's white Grecian gown with gold leaves appliqued on the shoulders and a wide gold belt . . . Caroline Hunnewell's Yuletide outfit of pale green lame with crimson bow in her blonde hair and crimson pocketbook . . . Isabella Grandin's billowy tulle gown of emerald green with a scarlet wrap . . . the long white fox scarf on Mrs. Harold Coolidge's black velvet wrap . . . Emily Dick's royal blue swishy taffeta . . . and the countless pairs of low-heeled slippers of all colors . . .

Others, and we simply cannot mention them all, were Sue Dalton and Sue Ayer, Milton post-debs; Happy Gardiner, Lucy Stone, Mr. and Mrs. William English, the junior Arthur Devenses, Mr. and Mrs. B. Davis Crowninshield, Harriet Richardson, the Frederick Crockers, Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Faxon, Greta Erickson, whose black gown sparkled with bands of gold spangles edging the skirt panels; Jane McKay Frost, Patricia Bird, Betty Emery, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Coolidge, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Aldrich, Edith Parker, Susan Morse, and Joanna Palfrey in a scarlet taffeta frock with wide flounces . . .

Francesca Cagiati Weds Today

MEMBERS OF THE Dover-Medfield-Readville clique, who usually occupy their week-ends away from the social activities of the city, with hunting and polo, had the unusual experience today of having a wedding of international importance take place right in their very midst . . .

The marriage was that of Miss Francesca Cagiati, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francesco Cagiati, who are residing in Dover this season, to Viscount Acheson, son of the Earl of Gosford of New York and of Mildred, Countess of Gosford, of London . . .

The ceremony was performed in St. Edward's Church in Medfield and was followed by a reception at the Cagiatis' residence . . . The bride's mother is the former Caroline Higbee of Boston, a sister of Mrs. Walter Channing of Dover, and also of Mrs. Robert Raymond of Readville . . .

All eyes were upon the attractive bride and her distinguished father as he escorted her to the altar to give her into the keeping of the Viscount . . . She wore a simple gown of white lame instead of the traditional satin, and a tulle veil fastened to a filet of orange blossoms . . .

Burgundy velvet toques and gloves with arm bouquets of variegated blossoms, added a very Frenchy note to the brides-maids' yellow crepe gowns . . . In the procession were the bride's sister, Barbara; Priscilla Prince, Victoria Potter, Mary R. Frost, all Boston society girls; Rosemary G. and Aileen G. Forbes, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. J. Grant Forbes of Westerham, Kent, England, and sisters of Mrs. Frederic Winthrop, Jr., of Groton House, Hamilton and Anne Richardson of Atlanta, Georgia . . .

* * *

Connected With Prominent Families

THE USHERS WERE the Messrs. Alessandro Capiati, brother of the bride; Marshall Haseltine of Cambridge and Paris; Shirley Carter of Baltimore, first cousin of the bridegroom; Walter Channing, Jr., of Dover, cousin of the bride; Pennington Euer and John Howells of New York, and George Schlapp of St. Louis . . .

On her mother's side the bride is connected with many prominent American families, including the Posts of New York, the Emlens and Howells of Philadelphia, the Townsends of Albany, the Greenes of Rhode Island and the Bigelows and Olmsteads of Connecticut . . . Her father's family has long been identified with art in Rome, and her father has supervised the exhibition of art treasures of the Vatican and Roman museums all over the world . . . The Cagiatis spend a great deal of time at their chalet in Switzerland . . .

COUSINS HONORED IN TROPICAL GARDEN SETTING IN WESTON

LAWRENCE VAN B. NICHOLS HELEN LANG HERBERT P. VOSE LOUISE RANNEY

(Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

THE SPACIOUS BALLROOM of the Weston Golf Club was turned into a tropical garden for the dance which was given there last night for two of Boston's debutantes, Miss Helen M. Lang and Miss Louise Ranney, cousins, and their hostess was their great-aunt, Miss Helen M. Ranney. The honored debs were chatting with Lawrence Van B. Nichols of Weston, who was head usher, and Herbert P. Vose, who was one of the usher group, when the camera man arrived. Miss Lang, who is the daughter of the Malcolm Langs of Bay State road, wore a gown of white crepe, while her cousin, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dudley P. Ranney of Wellesley Farms, chose a model of ivory satin for her debut.

Two Fetes for Deb

Eleanor Blackall Honored

AS if to compensate for having been so busy all fall with her collegiate activities at Radcliffe, Eleanor Blackall is indulging in a very social week-end and making her debut not only at one party, but at two.

Besides welcoming her into the ranks of society, her many friends will also have an opportunity to congratulate her for being recently elected president of the freshman class at Radcliffe.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Blackall of Milton, and her grandmother, Mrs. Clarence H. Blackall, are giving the two parties, both teas, one this afternoon and one tomorrow.

For today's festivities the debutante is wearing a frock of rose Moire silk with a bouquet of pink tea roses and blue larkspur, and her mother is reversing the color scheme with her own gown of larkspur blue with pink roses. Mrs. Blackall, Sr., has chosen a costume of black velvet with gardenias.

To harmonize with the rose and blue color scheme of the debutante's outfit, the tea tables have been decorated with pink roses and candles, with touches of blue for variety. Mrs. William H. Farnham (Mary Daley) is in charge of today's pourers, who include the Misses Carolyn Pierce, Sister Ware, Peggy Sperry, Phyllis Motley, Nancy Ames and Nancy Chafee.

Shall Prejudice Prevail?

ANY Christian who ponders the records of his Lord's enigmatic experience of constant opposition and rejection, during His brief life on earth, is bound to reckon with the baleful power of religious prejudice.

And today the Church could hardly mistake the fact that the real resisting enemy in their way is the prevalence of prejudice. If contemporary Christians feel this, they do well to pause and consider how much more maliciously the Hebrew peoples have suffered at the hands of this sinister force.

In so far as it affects the amour propre of those who suffer injustly, the way is not blocked but open. There is a sublime grandeur in the person who refuses to give way to provocation, who persists in generous attitudes toward those who are antagonistic for no good reason.

Yet it is far harder to accept the sadness one feels for those people who wilfully estrange themselves toward life's supreme privilege, and will not be convinced, because they are under the dominion of unreason, and are thinking not with their minds but with twisted emotions.

Thousands of modern homes are now divided on the religious issue. Even if the wife is willing to accept the loneliness of her position, by reason of her attachment to religion, and to accept the lack of unity in the home, and the influence upon the children of the father's careless disregard of God which hinders every effort with the children, she can hardly rest content.

Anyone who has sensed that God is the light of life, that spiritual values alone really matter, cannot be happy to watch her husband so unreasonably refuse to grant a fair hearing to any message that comes to him in the name of religion.

Unnumbered men are doomed today to an alienation from God that already evidences itself in poisoning their spirits with inner dissatisfaction, and threaten to cheat them of their immortal souls. Yet they do not allow themselves to be reached by the truth of God, because they have built about themselves an impenetrable wall of prejudice.

Yes, prejudice is the enemy of reason, of human welfare, of life, of God. It is the strangest disease that infects the soul. Yet it is by no means incurable.

Things happen to us that pierce and puncture our defense, and force recognition of our need of God. And some people of Christlike spirit, who handle our sensibilities with love's anointed touch, who pray for us when we know it not, are often God's effective messengers to recall us to our rightful mind, and to lead us back to our own native land in God.

IF YOU ARE bewildered to the point of madness by contributions of Christmas glamour that smite you between the eyes at every turn these days, compromise on the loveliest gift of all—an enchanting pillow sachet.

Of white, bridal velvet, decorated with sprays of diaphanous flowers, and filled with a heady, seductive perfume, they are destined to scent your clothes in a truly glorious manner.

Here indeed is a gift of feminine warmth—a gift for every woman whose name can be found in the Blue Book of perfect taste. Not only will these delightful sachets perfume your clothes, your bedroom (even your very dreams) but their delightful fragrance will last indefinitely.

Since the yen for sachets seem to be even more sure-fire than ever this Christmas, these pillows offer the best solution of that what-can-I-give problem. They are really something to marvel about and are the last word in luxury for orchidaceous ladies.

They come in two sizes, the smallest being approximately 12x4. These can go in the lingerie drawer and the larger on a chaise longue or bed. Against the old-ivory velvet background you have a choice of three colors in the flowers—red and white, blue and white or orchid and white.

The sprays are attached firmly on top of the pillows and are as diaphanous as moonlight. The same firm which last Christmas brought out the famous perfumed pomander in sponsor for this dazzling bit of elegance.

If you would like to know the name of this beautiful pillow sachet and the store where it can be bought, phone Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Question—Will you please tell me how to use eye-shadow correctly? I recently bought some violet shadow which you recommended for brown eyes, but since I do not know how to apply it, I am not achieving much success with it. I know it must be adroitly and properly applied.
Nancy H., Boston.

Answer—No detail of make-up can convey the subtle, heavy-lidded, mysterious expression as can eye shadows. And no beauty prop can do such a flop as these films when not properly applied. Cream the eyelids first. Use vaseline if you like, or a thin cosmetic. Wipe most of it away. Shadows put on a dry surface will not spread easily. Extend the shadow upward to a point midway between lashes and brows, or just under the edge of the boney cave when brows have been tweezed along the under line. Do a neat fadeaway there, also at either end of your shadow clouds.

Letters received by the Beauty Department which do not contain stamped, self-addressed envelopes will not receive personal answers. A number of such letters are being held up for this reason. Following are initials of persons whose letters did not contain required postage:

Mrs. A. F. L., Dorchester; Mrs. Cornelius H. B., Worcester; Lillian B. B., Bridgewater; Mrs. A. W. L., Roxbury; Rose B. L., Roslindale; Mrs. Eyan D. S., North Hampton, N. H.; Mrs. M. D., Cambridge; Ruth B., Boston; Miss Marie O., Revere; Mrs. Mary S., Cambridge; Florence L. B., Bradford; Mrs. Louise S., Lewiston, Me.;

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Should Husbands Share Life Interests?

AT ARLINGTON Court House, across the river from Washington, D. C., a circus clown's wife filed suit for divorce a day or two ago because, among other things, her husband was a grouch at home and had no sense of humor.

The clown in question was no amateur fun maker who drew patronizing laughs at parlor gatherings and church socials. He had made the big tops ring with shouts of merriment and was none richer than "Francisco, the Clown."

But he's now a little past the age when a clown may climb on a horse by the tail, or convulse the house by falling off an elephant, and is employed in the Government Printing Office in Washington. There, with a grimace or a gesture, he can still convulse his fellow employes.

But there were no amusing quips, quirks or humorous sallies at his own fireside. And his wife found that living with Portillo—which is his surname—was pretty drab and dreary. This taken in connection with the fact that he spent money on "others," made Mrs. Portillo file suit for divorce.

So much for a clown bringing down the circus tent with his antic, and giving his wife the blues at home. The Portillo case again raises the age-old question of how many husbands share their business and professional interests with their wives.

And what do they talk about when they're home? And do they seek the society of women outside the home, who can talk with them about their work?

When Ruth Bryan Owen, our minister to Denmark, was in Washington lately, she was the guest of honor at a luncheon at which I happened to be. She spoke of something which made the wife of a certain senator prick up her ears. With considerable petulance the lady said "He seems never told me about that." Then consoling herself with an extra dash of whipped cream, she said: "But he never says anything about politics or world affairs at home."

Why did she have to wait for her husband to tell her what was going on in the world, with excellent newspapers on every stand? We wondered.

Does the average husband like this type of wife? Perhaps not—find them restful. Maybe it's a relief to come home to a wife and leave all the cares of the office or shop on the door mat. What do you think about it? Write and tell me which is more desirable.

There are several outstanding cases of women who knew nothing of their husbands' affairs, even when these involved world-wide interests. Mary Todd, the wife of Lincoln, knew nothing of politics. Samuel Johnson, who wrote the first English dictionary, had a silly wife who hardly knew one definition from another.

DEAR ELSIE:

"You Speak With Great Care and Forethought . . . and the World Says It Rings True!"

--Says Bradford Woman

This is one of a series of $1 prize-winning letters, written on the subject, "What I Think of Elsie Robinson's Articles, 'Listen, World!'"

Miss Evelyn Lahey, 7 Brooks street, Bradford, writes:

Dear Elsie:

Each and every article that you write rings true to life! That is why I read them so eagerly each evening.

One feels that here is a woman who has known all human emotions, one who has lived through bitter heartbreak and one who has known great joy. And one who has known the sumbness that lies beyond grief and tears. Her problems are the problems of the world.

When a person has had a lot of hard luck, he does not care to listen to someone theorising from the academic standpoint. Here is one who points out a code of ethics to the milling, red-blooded world in a vague "other world" manner.

One feels that Elsie Robinson is not speaking extemporaneously, but with great care and forethought so that she can bring her philosophy of life to the world, and the world will say, "It rings true!"

"True Love"

By Nell Brinkley

TRUE LOVE likes to do things for the beloved. The plain fare of everyday service is not enough; there must be candies and wine and extra dishes. Easy things are not enough. True love goes out of its way to offer gifts that were either hard in the getting or the making.

And the true beloved values the offering that meant effort. What if the stitches in DAD'S scarf that his little girl lovingly breathed hard over are a bit screwed about; and some dropped entirely? It's the loveliest scarf ever a man had, Dad thinks—because he is a true beloved, and is glad of being loved truly.

What if the one that her big sister makes for her young man is a little wider at one end than the other; and not quite wide enough anywhere? Bill knows that Betty thought lovely, glittering, unspeakable dreams of him while she did it; he knows her warm heart; and he wears it like a knight's guerdon.

What if Gran'ma, who makes a sweater for the beloved of her heart, the grandson . . . and there's nothing wrong with the knitting that Gran'ma knits, ever . . . does scold a fellow and heckle him sometimes? He knows she loves him, because she lets him do things that no one else will, and makes him a sweater when she is old and tired. True love there, on both sides.

Hurry up, girls . . . Christmas is almost here!

I Want You Only : By Elenore Meherin

CHAPTER THIRTY

Nell blinked. She said with a self-conscious laugh: "Oh—you didn't hear about us? You're surprised. You didn't know we were married?"

"No. I hadn't heard. Whom did you marry?"

"Why—Ricky, of course! We had to keep it secret. I didn't want to lose my job."

If possible, Isabel looked more startled. She said limply: "Why, I thought Ricky was in Detroit. I had a letter from Vera Holmes only this morning. Odd she didn't mention he was married. Surely you're not keeping it secret now?"

The last word came out loudly like a blow.

"We're not keeping it secret," said Nell in a quiet distant tone. "Lee Edwards and all Ricky's friends know it."

"Oh, of course!" said Isabel recovering. "Vera took it for granted I knew. Well, I hope all goes well with you. You'll surely be able to get out to Detroit afterwards? You must!"

"Yes—I am hoping. I'm praying. But my mother is dying."

Tears came to Isabel's eyes. She gripped Nell's hand: "I'll say a prayer too. You poor brave dear! Let me know how you come out."

Nell walked to the subway. She found the sunshine blinding and the exultant Spring breeze an assault.

All her agonized fears returned. Vera was seeing a great deal of Ricky. She was writing about him. They were having dinner and luncheons together.

Surely he had told of his marriage. It hadn't mattered to Vera.

That night she slept fitfully. She tried valiantly to recreate the mood of trust and love which had dominated and thrilled her as she looked at the cherry trees. It was gone. In its place, a hurricane of grief and despair.

Her thoughts screamed across the waste between them. Her thoughts flew out like maddened birds and clung to him.

Horrible Dream

She awakened from a distressing dream in which Ricky had smilingly asked her to free him. He had bowed low and said blandly:

"I've got a date to dance," and had waved and gone off with a girl in red whose face Nell could not see.

She awakened with a start and the perspiration damp on her forehead. For moments she listened to harrowing sounds.

They seemed part of the nightmare in which she dwelt. Wounded cries. Little bleating sounds that flickered and went out and flickered again.

She made out sounds: "Nell! Oh, God, God help me. Nell!"

Nell jumped from the bed and made her way stumbling and with terror across the living room. The sounds were coming from her mother.

She stood at the door and called demandingly: "Dad, what's happened?"

Her mother went on in a lost demented way.

Nell pulled open the door, switched on the lights. For a deadly moment she swayed against the wall, appalled by the spectacle before her.

Nell ran for medicine the doctor had given her. She poured it with shaking, terrified hands between her mother's lips.

As she did this Mom made a valiant effort and smiled. It was heart-breaking. It was beautiful. It made Nell proud and glad.

She brought icebags and laid them on Mom's forehead. Then she went to a chest where her mother kept a store of comforters. These she flitched in her leisure hours.

When Nell brought them and started to remake the bed Mom protested faintly: "They're for you, Nell—please!"

Nell brought warm water and washed her mother gently. Mom's face was blanched and sunken . . . only the dark torture in the eyes alive.

Afterwards she put on a big coat and through the gray chill dawn sat at her mother's bed. "We should take you to a hospital, dear."

"Please, NO!"

It was four o'clock. Her stepfather had not yet come in. In these three days since the quarrel when Nell refused him the money, Henry Mason had not spoken to her. He had been out very late each night.

"How desolate to die alone," Nell thought. "Could he not wait these few months?"

Then it occurred to her that she was very much like her mother. She, too, was the adoring woman—on her knees to her mate. Men cannot stand this. They go away and leave you, hating your weak, imperious need of them.

"Are you crying, Nellie, dear?"

"Just a little, Mom. You suffer so."

"Not now. Not at all."

"And I know you're lonely, sad."

"I have you. I have Jimmy." Her mother's eyes closed. Tears came to the corners. After a long while Mom said slowly—with great effort:

"Nellie, don't blame him. He has been kind to me. I know that must be hard—seeing what I have become. I don't mind that beside another."

"Oh, Mom!"

Her mother gave a despairing smile, "I know it. I want you to remember that I'm glad if any happiness comes to Henry. Through me he has had very little."

Her mother's hand motioned to the window. "The scrap of a letter, Nell. From her. He reads them in the night, thinking I sleep. Pick that up. Don't let him know I ever knew."

Mechanically Nell picked up the two fragments. She tore them into little bits and let them drift heedlessly from the half open window.

"Now go and rest," said Mom with relief. "I'm better."

Nell crept to her bed. She felt icy with cold. Her teeth chattered noisily. She couldn't stop them.

She drifted into heavy opaque sleep. Sleep weighed her down like a ton of lead. Above it her mind wandered distressfully.

She awakened finally at seven. She felt weak with alarm. Her whole body shook with apprehension. She thought bestem: "It will be born today." Secretly her mind added: "It will be dead."

Nell Collapses

All morning as she waited on her mother and as she cleaned the house, the horrible visions of the night afflicted her. She dread entering her mother's room.

Each time the face against the pillows looked more sunken. It was a gray shadow of a face that stirred and moaned.

About 1 o'clock Nell began to pack her suit-case. Her date was the 10th of May. But she must be ready, the doctor said.

She got up suddenly and put on her coat, her whole being consumed with passion to hear from him.

"I'm going out to do a little shopping. You'll be all right, Mom, dear?"

She started quickly down the many steps. Sweat broke out on her forehead. Shafts of pain tore momentarily through her. She smiled and knew that the skin drew tight about her teeth.

It was hysterical in her: it was foolish. She had almost three weeks to wait. This was just a warning. She knew of these things.

The store where she could send the telegram, where she could sit and wait for his answer was but two blocks distant.

She had reached the end of the first when a sudden jagged arrow of pain brought her arms hugging about her and a sharp, wildly indignant cry to her lips. It lasted but a moment. It left her moist, frightened, half fainting.

"I can't make it," she thought, limp with alarm. It occurred to her distraught mind that the baby was coming. It might be born in the street.

A little boy passed. Nell called to him. "Stand here, a moment. I feel ill."

The bewildered lad compiled. He was frightened. He thought her mad.

"I have a little brother like you. Wait with me to that house. Please."

And the child did.

She was again at the foot of the dreary, devastating stairs. She began to climb upward, harrowing pictures of her mother adding to her sickness and fear.

"I'll phone the doctor," she thought with sudden decision. "I'll ask Mama Raskovitch to get him."

She leaned heavily against the door of the Raskovitch flat. She rang. Again and again. Pulses thundered in her ears. Her thought wandered vaguely, swirling through many fogs.

"Crying Again?"

She didn't know whether she fainted or whether she just stood there waiting. Presently the silence reached to her mind. She began plodding heavily up the remaining stairs. She was now talking to herself:

"Mama Raskovitch isn't home. Phone the doctor. Somebody get the doctor."

Her mother moaned as she crossed the living room: "Who is talking? Nell, bring me water."

Nell thought with piercing clarity: "Oh, lord, I ran away. I left her."

She brought the water and held it to Mom's colorless lips, saying with a sob: "I left you! I shouldn't."

"Crying again, Nell? What did you say?"

She stooped down and kissed her mother's cheek. She said, quietly, controlled again: "Don't be frightened, mother, dear!"

She went into her own room and shut the door. She had no pain now. She thought lucidly: "It'll be born today."

And she made plans. The moment Jimmy came home, he must phone the doctor. Then she would come and take care of Mom. Nell would leave for the hospital this afternoon.

She washed resolutely, powdered and combed out her hair. It was almost three. In half an hour, Jimmy would return from school.

"It was terror—sheer terror that got me down," she told herself with a grim smile as she set the waves in her hair.

Then she was clinging to the bureau, pressing her clenched fists against her teeth, her eyes sinking in her head from pain.

She came out of it shaking, perspiration dripping from her forehead and her face pale and shining with anguish.

But when Jimmy poked his head in her room; when he said, startled:

"Gee, what's the matter with this house? Everybody's in bed?" tears of relief rushed down her cheeks.

"Tell Esther to come at once. Be sure. Tell her I'm going to the hospital and someone must stay with Mom."

Given in Marriage

By ADELE GARRISON

CHAPTER 823

KATIE'S EYES widened with excitement as I told her what she was to say to Lillian, and she nodded her head vigorously.

I knew that, as always, her movie-loving brain was thrilling to this faint hint of mystery and intrigue.

"Sure! I feex," she said, as I moved toward the couch. "But I cover you oop first," she added as she hurried ahead of me, adjusted the pillows and caught up the brilliantly colored Indian blanket foided at its foot ready for use.

"Dere!" she said, as she tucked the blanket around my feet and then drew the other end protectingly across my shoulders. "You no ketch cold now. Und don't you worry nodings. Me, I feex everyting."

I got a hand free and waved a frantic signal, for I had heard the creak of the library door, and knew that in a minute or two Lillian and Hugh would be back in the living room.

FEIGNING SLEEP

I need not have feared for Katie. I never have seen a human being move more quickly than she did at my signal. She was across the room and advancing toward the library door by the time I had composed boyelf to simulate slumber.

"Oh-h! Missis Undervood!" she exclaimed theatrically. "Vere you been? I boont and boont for you."

Lillian ignored the question, and put one of her own.

"Is Mrs. Graham ill?" she demanded in a low voice, and I heard her footsteps rapidly coming toward me.

HUGH WORRIED

"No, no," Katie whispered. "Sh-h! She sleep. Four—fife—maybs seex meenits ago she say she so tired, und I feex her oop all nice on couch. She say plees nobody vake her till she vake oop herself."

"Is that natural?" Hugh Grantland's deep voice had a distinctly worried inflection.

"I don't know. I'll take a look at her," Lillian responded, advancing to my couch as she spoke.

LILLIAN'S SUSPICIONS

It seemed an eon that Lillian stood there looking down at me. It probably was about half a minute. But when she finally moved away, I almost spoiled everything with a gusty sigh of relief which I caught back just in time.

It is not like Lillian to betray agitation, but I heard her quick intake of breath and was not surprised at her ruthless interruption of Katie.

"Telephoned. Why didn't you call me? What did he say?"

"Meester Undervood he say it no necessary," Katie returned in a voice which held injured dignity. "He say to tell you train vas quarter of hour late und he vould call again ven est get in."

"Oh!" Lillian rejoined, then added slowly:

"But I still don't see why with a quarter of an hour on his hands, he didn't ask to talk to me."

Health

Disorders Curbed by Caution

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

SOMETIMES the observance of a few simple health rules is sufficient to cure or to prevent certain disorders.

An excellent example of this is the present method of dealing with hookworm.

This disease was at one time universally prevalent in the south. But it has been controlled by the energetic efforts of the health departments of the various states.

Of course, certain localities still harbor the hookworm disease. It is especially prevalent in the tropical and sub-tropical countries of th world.

The hookworm is a round, tapering worm, varying from one-half to three-quarters of an inch in length. Once a hookworm lodges in the human intestine it may remain there for years unless driven out by special medication. A sufferer from hookworm may harbor hundreds, perhaps a thousand worms.

The sufferer from hookworm has a peculiar craving for chewing and actually swallowing inedible objects, such as clay and other dirt reain, chalk and hair. This inclination should always arouse suspicion that hookworm is present. It warrants an examination of the stool to determine whether these worms are present or not.

Usually the hookworm enters the body through the skin. For this reason the disturbance used to be prevalent in sections of the country where the natives walked barefooted. The first measure was an insistance upon the wearing of footgear.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES

Q.—Is there any danger in having an ulcer on the eyeball removed? Can it be done under a local anesthetic?

A.—Your doctor will advise you along these lines. A condition of this nature requires special medical attention.

Dr. Copeland is glad to answer inquiries from readers who send addressed stamped envelopes with their questions. All inquiries should be addressed to him in care of this newspaper.

WAFFLES FOR HOLIDAY GET-TOGETHERS

They Score at Informal Feasts

By MARTHA LEE

"MAKE MINE waffles," you suggest to the waitress after looking over the menu in your favorite restaurant. While you wait for your order, you recall those breakfasts at home with fresh, tempting waffles baked on a steaming hot electric griddle, served with liberal quantities of butter and maple syrup.

Waffles are a delicacy that everyone enjoys for breakfast or luncheon. They are a grand addition to Sunday night suppers. It is fun to let waffles, baked at the table, be the feature for informal company meals. You can build the supper or luncheon around a main dish waffle or around a waffle dessert.

If you have a special recipe you can vary it with the addition of nuts, chocolate or fruit for "surprise" waffles. Serve plain waffles with hot melted butter in individual pitchers or hot honey butter.

Chicken a la King or creamed mushrooms on crisp waffles makes a good tasting main dish for luncheon or an unexpected company supper. Waffles, crisp, brown and fragrant with butter, syrup and hot coffee, are a life saver for quick refreshments when friends drop in for an evening of bridge.

If you haven't your own favorite recipe, you might like to try this one for:

SOUR CREAM WAFFLES

2 cups flour
1½ teaspoons soda
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons salt
2 cups sour cream
1½ cups buttermilk
4 eggs

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Beat eggs thoroughly, add milk and cream and beat until smooth. Yield: 8 waffles.

An electric waffle iron equipped with a heat indicator is the most satisfactory utensil for cooking waffles. Be sure to follow the directions which come with the iron. About 1-3 cup of batter is enough for one waffle. Close the iron and when steam no longer escapes between the two halves, the waffle should be brown and crisp and ready to be lifted out with a fork.

Honey Butter is delicious served hot or cold with crispy hot waffles, griddle cakes or other hot breads. To make it use:

½ cup butter
1 cup honey

Let butter stand at room temperature to soften. Then mix with the honey, stirring well. Put mixture in a jar, cover tightly and keep in the refrigerator.

To make pecan waffles, use the recipe for waffles given here, adding 2-3 cup of pecans finely chopped.

Chocolate waffles are popular made at the table for dessert. Serve them with whipped cream, or vanilla or chocolate ice cream.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST
Grapefruit
Crisp Bacon
Popovers — Butter

Bridge

Partnership Co-operation Is Needed

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

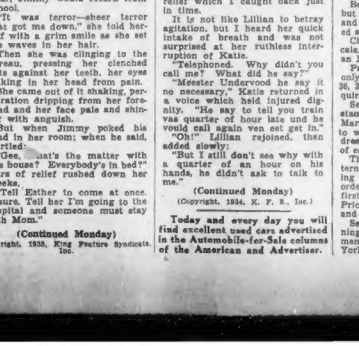

Partnership co-operation can have the streamlined perfection of present day motor cars, or the jerky undependability of a horseless buggy.

Many Bridge hands may be said to "bid themselves"—the proper contract is so easy to reach.

Others, however, require deft handling to avoid the loss of a game and a crushing penalty.

Today's hand illustrates partnership co-operation at its best.

West, dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	Double	4 ♠	5 ♡ (1)
Double (2)	Pass	Pass (3)	Pass

(1) South, placing full confidence in his partner's takeout double, refuses to be shut out by East's pre-emptive bid. He feels sure that North would not have doubled one spade without excellent support for the other major suit—a prerequisite of the Culbertson System. So with only one Queen and one Jack in his hand, he takes only a slight risk in contracting for 11 tricks.

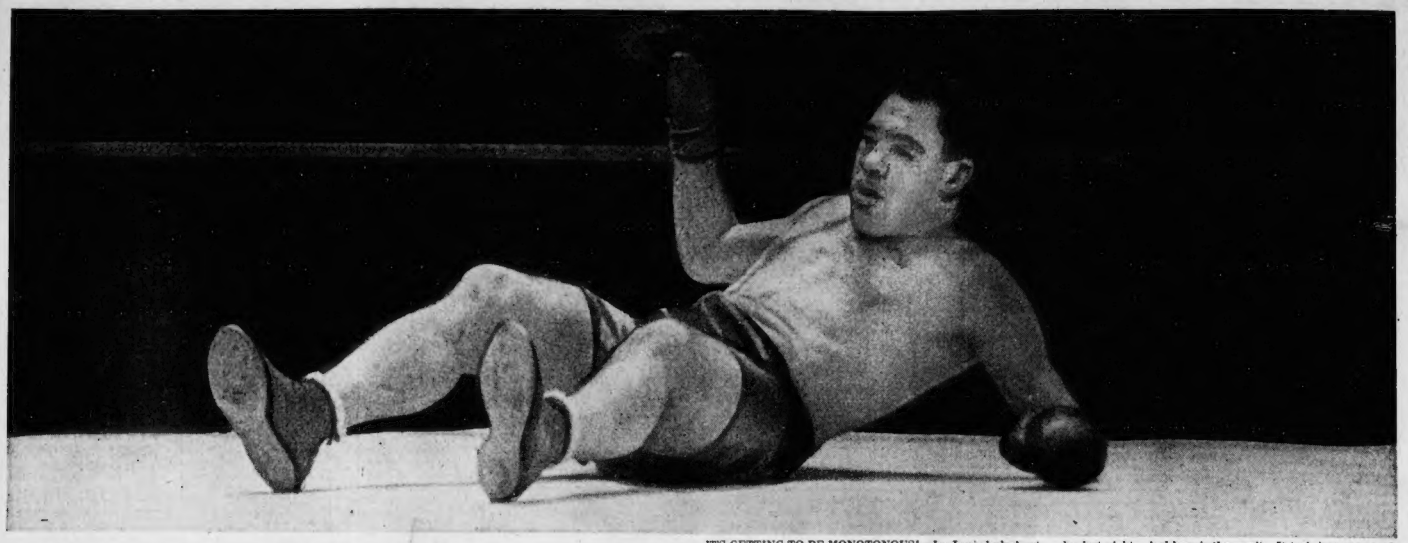

(2) West knows that his partner is very long in spades and weak in honor tricks, but he naturally supposes that five hearts should be defeated, especially in view of his own fourcard spade suit.

(3) East feels that he told his story when he gave the triple trump raise. For all he knows, West may be able to defeat the five heart contract with no help whatsoever.

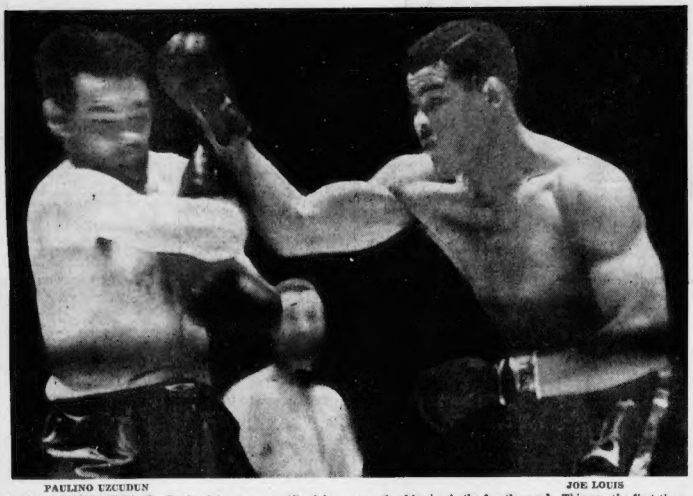

There was nothing to the play except a simple finesse for the diamond King, and the contract was made with ease, declarer losing only one spade and one heart.

Had the opponents sacrificed at five spades, and North guessed the opening lead of the club Ace and continuation, a 700 point penalty would have resulted.

PUNCHPROOF BASQUE FALLS VICTIM TO FOOLPROOF BOMBER

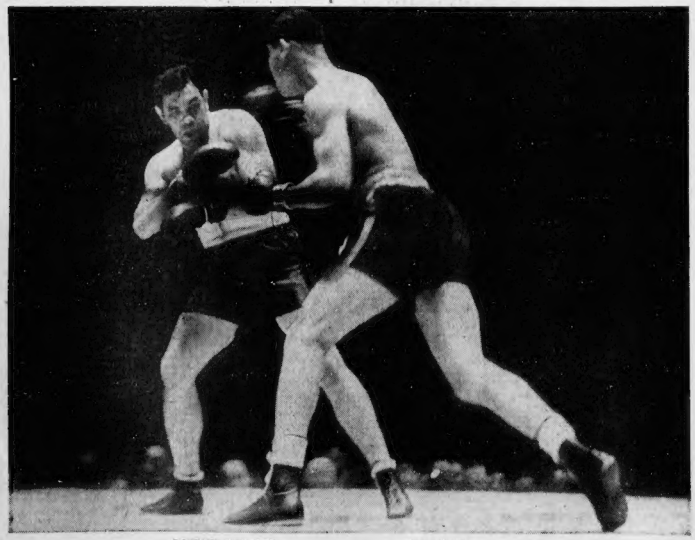

IT'S GETTING TO BE MONOTONOUS!—Joe Louis lashed out with a right hand punch and Paulino Uzcudun sneaked a peak from under his flabby but protecting arms in the fourth round of the heavyweight slaughter at Madison Square Garden last night. And here is the result. It took just one punch to do this and, although Paulino staggered to his feet, Referee Donovan stopped the massacre as another Louis punch almost ripped Paulino through the roof.

PAULINO UZCUDUN JOE LOUIS

A $20,000 HEADACHE!—Joe Louis, right, rips a terrific right to Paulino Uzcudun's head as he continued his sensational knockout streak at the Madison Square Garden last night. Louis won by a technical knockout after two minutes and 32 seconds of boxing in the fourth round. This was the first time Paulino was ever knocked out, but maybe it was worth it, for the Basque pulled down a little better than $20,000 as the Garden was jammed to its capacity.

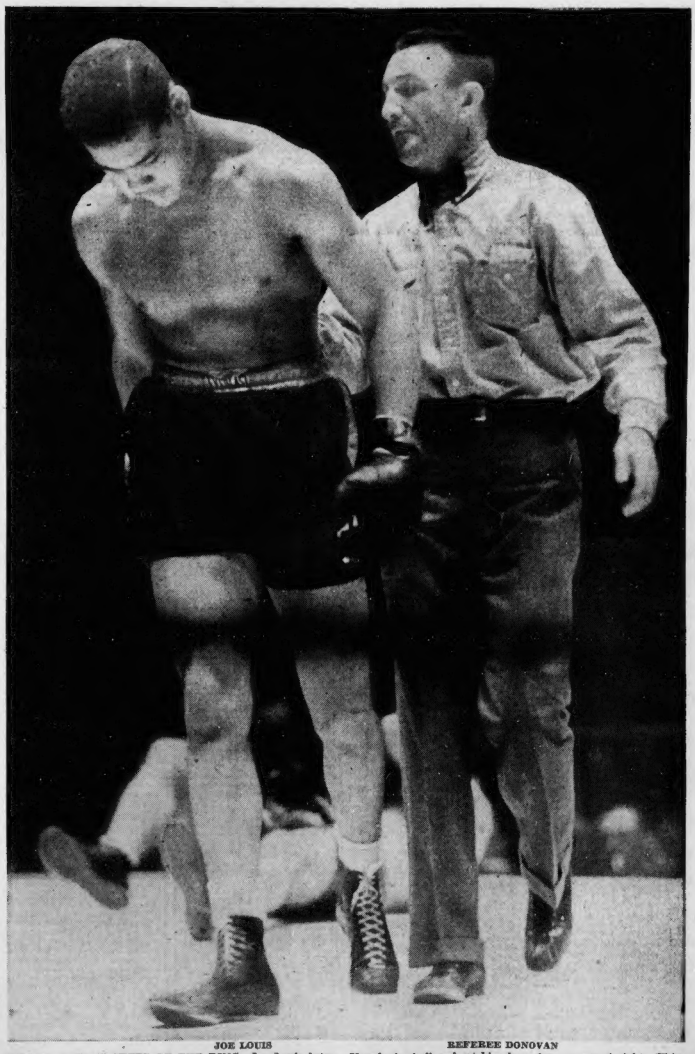

PAULINO UZCUDUN JOE LOUIS

"LOOK OUT, PAULINO, HERE IT COMES!" Paulino Uzcudun sneaks a quick look at Joe Louis' dynamite right which is well on its way to register on the Basque's chin.

(Pictures from International News Photograph Service)

Paulino, who fought in a shell, just didn't get his arms up fast enough but he managed to stay on his feet after Louis' landed with a right hand punch.

JOE LOUIS REFEREE DONOVAN

"POKER FACE SLAYER" OF THE RING—Joe Louis being calmly escorted to a neutral corner by Referee Arthur Donovan after the Bomber had exploded a right-hand punch on Paulino Uzcudun's skull and sat him down for a count of eight. This was something new in Paulino's career, but just a routine with Louis.

The Private Lives Of Foxx and Grove: Study in Contrasts

IT IS ODD THAT TOM YAWKEY'S millions have reunited Jimmy Foxx and Lefty Grove, whose early beginnings were set in the Maryland mountains, less than 100 miles apart, and who have led parallel athletic lives.

AUSTEN LAKE

I have visited Lefty in his hillside home at Lanaconing and Foxx in his suburban Philadelphia palace. For Lefty lives now as he always lived since childhood when his father and brothers blew coal from the lower levels of the bituminous mines, earning 60 cents an unscreened ton; when the family budget was a weekly problem and neighbors borrowed butter over the back fence.

But Foxx, whose origin had been on a farm in the Maryland foothills, lives now in a stylish stone mansion in the fashionable outskirts of Philadelphia, the home of a rich man, lavish with the finer luxuries, broad terraces and trimmed hedgerows.

I mention this to show the transition of the two lads who started life on the same humble plane at about the same time, and used their fortune to different ends. For Grove's home is a humble cottage on the high hump of a Blue Ridge mountain that looks down on timbered slopes and a silver ribbon of a river. And he dresses in hill-billy dungarees, with the regional look of unsatisfied hunger in his lean face and the fevered eye of the mountain-born man.

Most of the time, between October and March, he carries a shotgun in the hollow of his arm, as generations of earlier Groves toted their squirrel rifles and powder flasks, beating the dogwood and juniper bushes for wild turkeys that feed on the buds. And, whistling to his beagle hounds, he told me, "Yu' heuh them houn's piece away an' they soun' like church bells on Sunday mawnin'."

* * *

Urban Jimmy; Rural Mose

BUT FOXX LIVES IN HALLS so large that his voice comes bouncing back from the corners. He has great, lush carpets on the floors and crystal and gilt on the walls. And his dress is that of a landed esquire, cut jauntily, and his is the placid manner of a leisured socialite with a fondness for light, laughter and friends.

Lefty's and Jimmy's opposite tastes trace to different angles of life that each sees. For Grove, after the habit of his hill people, who have wrested a meager living from their unfruitful mountains, has a resentful affection for his crags and tilted town and an inherent distrust for strangers. So that, during baseball season he is often dour and distant.

But Foxx is bland, blue-eyed and cheerful, still with the rustic stamp of simplicity, a quick grin and a ready hand for everybody. Sudlersville, Md., is a grassland country where he was born and where his father and brothers still tend the dairy stock and till their patches. But Jimmy tells me the home soil holds no charm, and after his athletic career is done, he will not go back.

But Lefty vows that he will live and, when the time comes, die in his native village, where the day begins at five and the bedtime comes at ten. He has no fancy notions from big time baseball, his hero's life and the metropolitan luxuries around the league circuit.

A Use for Race-Rubbish

NOTHING WOULD SEEM more valueless than the tons of castoff race coupons that littered the ground at Suffolk Downs and Wonderland last summer. Yet Boston race bettors, who were foresighted enough to save the receipts of their old failures, can now produce them as evidence and shave a slice off their federal income tax.

A Washington, D. C., sports writer named Francis M. Cronin has won a test victory before the Board of Tax Appeals. The board ruled that his bundle of mistaken horse guesses, amounting to $890, was legal evidence of loss and therefore deductable from his taxable income.

The board opinion is that horse and dog gambling losses will be recognized by federal tax bureaus if incurred in states where betting is legalized, and if the claimant will swear that his wagering was done for profit and not for pleasure (Heh! Heh!).

Bookmakers' receipts will not be admitted.

Such news will rouse regret in the breasts of many a Boston horse and dog bettor, who might have gathered bushels of "loss" evidence from the floors at nearby tracks this summer.

Football's Annual Uproar

THE COLLEGE FOOTBALL PEOPLE are having their annual uproar over the ills and mistakes of the season. Professor George Owen of M. I. T. has scandalized Notre Dame, Ohi. State with his sermon on "football hypocrisy." The Southeastern Conference has voted to reward its varsity football players for their season's labors. The National Collegiate A. A. expresses horror at the heavy guzzling among football spectators.

It seems pretty well agreed that we are in the midst of another mischievous era, like the barbarian age of football, when journeymen coaches moved from job to job, taking their varsities along. The same shout goes up every winter, and the same easy tolerance sets in each fall. A great deal of wind is expended, but, like Grand Hotel, "nothing ever happens."

And the answer is, as long as enormous athletic budgets depend on big football gates, the same round of piety and scandal will be repeated. It does the college people good to boil up before simmering down to a gentle cool, and going on just as they have always gone on.

Pretty Polly Blodgett and Bernard Fox, two of the most brilliant fancy figure skaters in the country, trying a few double steps as they get set to compete in the Boston Evening American-Boston Sunday Advertiser Christmas Basket Fund Ice Carnival at the Arena tonight. Miss Blodgett and Mr. Fox are two of a classy array of ice stars who take part in this gala event.

Foxx Greets Boston By Radio Tonight

Jimmy Foxx, the $200,000 baseball beauty obtained by the Boston Red Sox from the Philadelphia Athletics, will greet Boston baseball fans for the first time over the air waves in a special radio broadcast arranged by the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser tonight.

Jimmy Foxx

Eddie Collins

Foxx will be heard over stations WBZ and WBZA from 6:15 p. m. until 6:30 p. m. tonight. In conjunction with Foxx, Eddie Collins, business manager of the Red Sox; Austen Lake, Boston American sports columnist, and Alan Frazer, special staff writer who is now in Philadelphia, will be heard in the broadcast.

Collins and Lake will speak from Boston, to be presented by Newcomb F. Thompson, radio editor of these newspapers, while Foxx will be heard and interviewed by Frazer in Philadelphia, where the new Sox first sacker is now living. Special arrangements have been made to pick up Foxx and Frazer in Philly. No doubt every baseball fan in New England will be anxious to hear from Foxx himself, who is expected to become a national hero here, and the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser are happy to be able to present the voice of this great star in the special address to baseball fans of this section tonight.

DANNO DOWNS STEELE AT GARDEN

By Walter Kiley

Danno O'Mahoney continues to rule the world heavyweight wrestling roost.

The Irishman, now veteran of 153 ring wars, retained his crown with a victory over Ray Steele of California before some 5500 spectators at Boston Garden.

Foiled in his efforts to employ his famous Irish Whip with telling effect, Danno caught the wily Westerner coming off the ropes, applied a body lift and back drop and was awarded the one-fall decision by Referee Sam Smith in one hour, four minutes and 16 seconds.

Revenge for Danno

It was sweet revenge for the champion who was making what may be his last Boston appearance in many months. For it more than paid off in full for the two-hour draw with Steele in Minneapolis recently.

It was an improved Danno. And it was good that he was.

Steele was a worthy antagonist who forced the issue throughout. He came primed for rough stuff and handed out blow for blow.

Steele went to work on O'Mahoney with a series of wrist and head locks and double hammer locks that for a time threatened to pin Danno.

But when Steele taunted Danno, the latter responded with the whip, the challenger being saved from an early fall when he rolled out to the very edge of the ring apron. Twice more the ropes proved life savers.

The bout was slated for a best two out of three falls. Once past the hour mark, the rules called for a one-fall decision.

O'Mahoney meets Ed Don George, former champion, at New York next Monday night, possibly his last appearance before sailing home on his Christmas and honeymoon visit.

Numa Ill

Leo Numa had a badly infected hand. Yvon Roberts of Montreal substituted for him in the semi-final and turned in a creditable performance in downing Hans Steinke in 7 minutes 25 seconds.

In preliminaries Billy Bartush defeated Stanley Sitkowski with a body lift and slam in 17.11. Michael Dohron threw Dominick Petroff in 4.30. Charlie Strack pinned Floyd Marshall after 10 minutes 38 seconds. Count Zarynoff and John Spellman went to a 20-minute draw. Henri Piers and Chief Little Moose battled to a 15-minute draw.

Berger Stays With Braves, Says Adams

New York, N. Y., Dec. 14 — Charles F. Adams, who recently promised his financial aid to Bob Quinn in the operation of the Braves, saw Joe Louis knock out Paulino in four rounds in the Garden. He was greatly impressed by the punching power and boxing ability of the "Brown Bomber."

"It is too bad there isn't a heavyweight who can give Louis some competition," said Adams.

Asked if the Braves planned to trade Wally Berger, Adams said he understood the home run king would remain with the Tribe.

"The recent deal with the Dodgers has given the Braves some needed strength," replied Adams. "Bob Quinn and Bill McKechnie intend to keep Berger. They will make an effort to secure some young players.

"I think with the Red Sox and Braves having improved teams baseball will boom in Boston during the coming season. I have just bought some additional land in New Brunswick and will soon go there for a vacation."

Harvard and Tech teams will meet for the third time this week as the wrestlers clash this afternoon in the Hangar Gym.

Stars in Skaters' Frolic

By Will Connell

Lightning action by skaters ranked with the world's best goes on tonight with the staging of the Gala Skaters' Frolic at the Boston Arena.

The Frolic, annual Olympic Club ice fete, aids the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston American and Sunday Advertiser.

Seven races by fast fields, the figure skating, a circus on skates, Queen of the Frolic and costume competitions for valuable awards, ice acrobatics and general skating make the Frolic the best variety ice show of the year.

Miss Maribel Vinson of New York, former Winchester girl, and present United States women's figure skating champion, appears in solo and pair numbers, highlights of the evening. She skates with George E. B. Hill, her United States championship partner, in the pair event.

Arrive Early

The figure skating events of the Skaters' Frolic are early in the program, to give the great skaters the best possible ice conditions. James Madden goes on at 8:05, five minutes after the Frolic starts. Don't miss the early numbers!

Pair skating by Miss Vinson and Hill, Miss Blodgett and Turner, Miss Tozzer and Fox will add much to the fete. From the figure skating angle along the Frolic is a top flight attraction.

Irving Jaffee, the world's greatest ice racer, will act as referee for the seven races, which have drawn outstanding entrants. The thrills of racing around a short course with high speed turns and the danger of spills make the races spectacular.

The "circus" includes clown, bullfighting, barrel jumping, the famed "First Skating Lesson" by Harry Fleming and Al Curley, the Magic Peanut who grows while one watches, and other numbers.

Queen of the Frolic event with a beautiful fur jacket donated by Sc Furriers for the winner, is a be r event. Costume battles are the most unique, and most beautiful, with two awards in each for firsts, and two awards in each for seconds.

The awards are a radio from World Radio Company, Summer street; two pairs of shoe skates donated by South End Hardware Company, Washington street; a hand bag from London Harness Company, Franklin street; a Ronson Lighter from Washington Jewelry Company; three pairs of silk stockings from Touraine Glove Company; many two-pound boxes of Viva candy bars from Edgar P. Lewis and Sons.

General skating for all, from the final event to midnight gives everyone a chance to enjoy the fun.

ROUTE, Mud, Weight HAZARDS

HORSE CINCH, SAYS DAVE

By Dave Wilson

BEST—INSCRIPTION

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 14—Worthington, my over night best bet, was scratched, so I will string along with Inscription to top the card today.

FIRST RACE

Tuleyries Star, Lucid, Rolling Along

TULEYRIES STAR, a superior soft-track performer, gets the call in an affair of this kind. LUCID will have ROLLING ALONG to whip for the place.

SECOND RACE

Inscription, Veritas, Bromide

INSCRIPTION has only to escape trouble in the run to the first turn in order to win this sprint. VERITAS may be along in time to take the place award from BROMIDE.

THIRD RACE

Infilee, Fan, Ardawn

INFILEE, if able to get postward, stands a royal chance in an affair of this kind. FAN should furnish the contention. ARDAWN and HARMOAK rate as named.

FOURTH RACE

Paul Junior, Dark Loveliness, Fairio

PAUL JUNIOR is heavily loaded, but must be given the preference in the Battletown, a mile and one-sixteenth test. DARK LOVELINESS has only to run to morning trials in order to take second money from FAIRIO.

FIFTH RACE

Jinnee, Corner Boy, Billowy Wave

JINNEE, a superior soft track performer, needs only a hustling ride in order to win the closing feature of the 1935 Eastern racing season. CORNER BOY'S recent races should be forgotten. Will have BILLOWY WAVE to whip for the place.

SIXTH RACE

Irish Vote, Princess Wrack, Jim Brown

It figures very close between IRISH VOTE and PRINCESS WRACK, but I'm casting my vote for the former. JIM BROWN may come to life and trim the others for the small end of the spoils.

SEVENTH RACE

Worthington, Brown Wren, Miss Catalan

If anything upsets the dops and downs WORTHINGTON it will likely be BROWN WREN. MISS CATALAN will be running at the close and should be up in time to save third money.

Pitcher

Archie Campbell "Can't Take It"

Los Angeles, Dec. 14 (AP)—Archie Campbell, Hollywood pitcher, didn't like the car he bought from Dave Fishman.

He didn't like Fishman's use of his name in advertising as a satisfied customer.

He didn't like Fishman's refusal of an allegedly promised $250 rebate on the car.

He didn't like the "embarrassment and humiliation" when he was knocked from the box and fans screamed:

"Go take a ride in your new car!"

So he sued Fishman for $30,000.

Louis Gives Christmas Fund $6800

New York, N. Y., Dec. 14—After knocking out Paulino in the Garden Bomber Joe Louis made a gift of $6800 to the Christmas Fund of the New York Journal and American. Under Louis' contract, he got 40 per cent of the net gate of $108,887 after deduction of the Fund's 10 per cent cut. His share was $38,600 and he turned back $6800 of this amount to the fund.

Paulino received 20 per cent, which amounted to $19,000. The Garden received 12½ per cent plus half of the profits of the Twentieth Century Club. This brought its end to $16,000.

The Twentieth Century Club received $3500. Jacobs also donated half of the profits of the show to the Christmas Fund which will give that charity $24,000.

Foxx Fights To Hit Way Into Job

By JIMMY FOXX

(As told to Austen Lake)

CHAPTER FIVE

In that first spring training trip to Fort Myers, Florida, I quickly realized that Mickey Cochrane was a rare baseball find, a hitting catcher with a quick analytical mind for getting the most out of his pitchers.

But I knew if I could satisfy Connie Mack that I could hit, no power on earth would dynamite me off that club.

So every spare moment I had I would induce some rookie pitcher to toss them up in some distant corner of the field. I even paid the kids that hung around the park to throw them over.

I want to say right here that this is the secret of good hitting. Practice and more practice, until you feel that life, blood and fibre extend out to the tip of the stick you handle.

I used to wonder, with all the barrage of baseballs I laid down from my remote corner of the outfield, how I escaped killing somebody. And to this day in training camp, I marvel that more men are not seriously injured with all the line drives that whizz around the park. Yet, except for an occasional superficial accident, I have never seen a man seriously damaged in spring training.

Ammunition Goes

I'll bet that spring I used up more baseballs, than any two players in the Athletics' camp, and I was asking for a new handout of balls so often that finally Kid Gleason called a halt.

"Say," he said, "we brought fifty dozen balls down here to camp and they are going fast. Ease up."

Connie Mack overheard him, and smiled. "No, Gleason," he said, "let him have all he needs. We'll order fifty dozen more if necessary."

Incidentally, it is nothing for a major league club to use 400 dozen balls in a season.

Now here is a useful hint for the boys. It usually takes three or more players and a big vacant lot to furnish the means of a batting practice. Even then few boys have the patience to pitch to one of their number or to chase after the balls he hits. That isn't fun.

But I remember a stunt that Ed Rouse, formerly of the Cincinnati Reds and New York Giants used to practise, even long after he became a successful hitter.

Ed was brought up on a farm and always spent the time between baseball seasons there. He would rig up a fairly tall pole and fasten a string to its top. Then he would attach a dry corn cob to the end of the string and whale away at that cob with a baseball bat.

Corn Cob Aid

He would hit the cob going and coming and, he told me, "You would be surprised to see the astonishing curves, dips and swoops those corncobs would take. It was as much as my sense of timing and my speed of eye could do to follow its flight."

Rhythm and timing come as a sixth sense and I am forced to fall back on the word "instinct."

You have to learn by constant practice just as an expert billiard player knows without being able to explain how he measures those amazing three cushion shots. He knows, that's all. But he cannot tell why he knows.

I can't stress too much the value of consistent and intelligent practice. As I recall it from school days it was George Washington who said, "Be sure you are right, then go ahead!"

That holds good in batting, too. Be sure you have discovered your best and most natural batting style and then go ahead to work with all that you have and at every possible opportunity.

Maj. McLaughlin Backs Up Owen

DEFENDS PROFESSOR'S VIEWS

By BILL COLLINS

Chicago, Dec. 14 (INS)—Purity in amateur athletics? It's a hearty laugh!

But Major Frederic McLaughlin, wealthy sportsman and owner of the Chicago Blackhawks, didn't laugh when he made the above statement.

Indeed, he was quite indignant today as he revealed his approbation of the statement of Prof. George Owen, Sr., of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, that college football is a major racket rather than a major sport.

A statement that has brought down on Prof. Owens the wrath of colleges and universities throughout the nation.

Maj. McLaughlin revealed he had telegraphed his sentiments to Prof. Owen, his message reading in part:

"There isn't anyone with any experience in both amateur and professional athletics who does not laugh heartily at amateur purity."

Well Qualified

The major is qualified to speak, since he has been closely associated with both amateur and professional sports. In addition to owning the Blackhawks, he was until about a year ago active in polo and a subchairman of the U. S. Polo Association.

While he was in the mood he called his secretary and dictated his definition of an amateur, a problem the various amateur bodies have been trying to solve for years.

Major McLaughlin's definition read in part:

"An amateur, in my opinion, is one who competes only for the sake of sport, anything received by him or by someone else, hardly has the right to be called an amateur.

"If a poor boy should go to school and because of a talent in some particular sport, should, by the exercise of that talent, be able to make his way through, I can't understand why there would not be some specified remuneration for that boy, as suggested by Professor Owen.

Play for Medal

"Let's say that 50 men would compete in a tennis tournament for a medal donated by another person, with no admission fees. Those men would be true amateurs. Take the same 50 men, have them play before a paying audience, and they cannot fairly be called amateurs. I would like to have any college president tell me why any group of young men, say a football team, making thousands of dollars a year for their schools by their athletic ability alone, should be charged for attending these schools.

"Why should a football player who gives up much of his time to the game itself have to wait on table, tend furnaces, or do other chores, and at the same time try to keep up in the classroom?"

Maj. McLaughlin revealed he had received an answer from Prof. Owen in which the latter thanked him "for his kind words, which had offset much of the abuse heaped on me on this subject."

MARBERRY Tries Comeback

New York, Dec. 14 (INS)—The New York Giants baseball club today announced the signing of Fred "Firpo" Marberry, former American league hurler and umpire of the junior circuit staff.

Marberry, who gave up his pitching career with the Washington Senators to umpire last season, will be given a training camp trial in an attempt to come back on the mound.

HANLEY Hits 'Cash GIFTS'

BY SOUTHEAST CONFERENCE

Open subsidization of college athletes "makes a bum" of the student and kills the amateur spirit of "the old college try," Leroy B. ("Pat") Hanley, head coach at Boston University, declared today.

He was opposed to the action of the Southeast Conference, which voted to give open financial assistance to deserving athletes.

"Cash gifts to students merely because they excel in athletics kills their self-respect," he said. He urged, however, that athletic students should be aided in the form of jobs conected with the school, particularly to pay off their tuition.

Plenty of Jobs

"Athletic ability and financial independence seldom accompany each other. There are plenty of jobs connected with every institution which could be given to deserving athletes who need financial assistance. Just because a student happens to be a star athlete is no reason why he should be discriminated against when an opportunity presents itself for a part-time job to aid him in securing a college education.

"Most athletes are not looking for a distinct financial favor, and he should not be frowned upon if he works his way through college by doing the same sort of part-time work his non-athletic brother employs to help him through school."

Wilson Moves To Tropical

Dave Wilson is now safely entrenched at Tropical Park, awaiting the bugle sound of opening day of Bill Dwyer's oval Monday. Wilson topped all handicappers at the Charles Town session of two weeks.

Wilson's graded handicaps, selections and comments for Tropical's first day card will appear in later editions of the Boston Evening American today and in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Wilson is the only Boston turf writer at the Miami track while the Boston Evening American is the only Boston evening newspaper printing Florida race charts.

The Boston Evening American and Dave Wilson are a winning parlay for all followers of King Horse. Start today and see for yourself why racegoers are talking Wilson and the Boston American. There must be a reason.

ST. JOE'S Fights TONIGHT

DIAMOND RING TOURNEY

Mechanics Building will be the scene of another stellar card of amateur boxing bouts this evening, when the first of the elimination Diamond Ring tournament of St. Joseph's T. A. S. gets under way.

Manager "Father Bill" Cuddy has arranged an attractive list of events which should furnish plenty of thrills for the fist cuff fans.

Gerald Hall, South Braintree representative, is one of the better warriors down to contest the 118 pound class. Hall displayed skill in last appearance at Mechanics.

Divisions that will be contested include the 118, 126, 135, 147, 160 and heavyweight classes.

118-Pound Class—Richard Volpe, Wakefield; Joseph Walker, South Boston; Gerald Hall, South Braintree; Al Somers, Chelsea.

126-Pound Class—Charles Shaw, Somerville; Mike Garrigan, Boston; William Reid, Winthrop; James Parar, Peabody; Blackie Warren, Dorchester.

160-Pound Class—John Sullivan, Cambridge; Morris Gordon, Chelsea; Larry Baker, Boston; Ralph Riddle, Peabody; Manny Viarvra, Halifax, Mass.; Eugene Woods, Boston; Oscar Larson, Framingham; Dominick Colontonia, E. Boston.

Heavyweight Class—Alex Mitchell, Worcester; Jack O'Brien, Allston.

Blacks Conquer

The Blacks captured both swimming and track events from the Maroons in the annual Huntington track meet held at the Y yesterday. The victors captured the pool events 40-35, and track 54-44.

Early this week, the Bruins broke out of a three-game losing slump by defeating the Maroons, holders of the world's championship.

Tonight the Cubs, who have been on the short end in their last three games, clash with the Philadelphia Ramblers, a group of ex-amateurs who have won nine out of eleven games, at the Garden.

Few of the Bruins fans believed that Frank Patrick's crew had more than an outside chance of turning back the Maroons. Fewer of the Cub supporters hold out any hope for their favorites against the Ramblers.

However, strange happenings frequently crop up in hockey and it would be a fine feather in their hats if the Cubs should tip over the Ramblers this evening, and emulate the feat the Bruins accomplished against Maroons.

With the exception of Babe Pratt Manager Herb Gardiner will start the team that represented the Crescent-Hamilton Club of Brooklyn last year in the Eastern Amateur League.

Pratt replaced Murray Patrick, who did not turn professional. He will have Bert Gardiner in the nets, Joe Cooper and Pratt, on the outer defense, and a forward line composed of Alex Shibicky and the Colville brothers, Mac and Neil.

The Ramblers are the most publicized team in the annals of minor league hockey. They have averaged almost four goals, while holding their opponents to 1,27, per game.

Gifts for the Gels That Will Cause Much Christmas Merriment

By M. A. WEISS

Comes a plaint from the mail sack..."Each year I succumb to the blandishments in the public prints and play Santa to the various femmes on my Xmas list. So that I can revise the spelling from s-u-c-k-e-r to S-a-n-t-a, will you please publish a manual of gifts that cause the diaphragms to heave and the lips to pucker ...and so lighten the burden of the male white race?"

* * *

Who am I to refuse aid in a just cause?

* * *

Until the time she tells her beads in preference to wearing them, no gal ever had enough perfume...of the right sort...let the salesgirl help you...heavy oriental scents for the sensuous brunette, light flower oders for the delicate blonde and spicy, saucy aromas for the vivacious redhead... get the idea? If she shrieks, "Atamizer"...she's not chiding you for penuriousness... but she's just overcome with the additional gift of the black glass and silver perfume spray illustrated at the left.

* * *

To the bud who's just ready to blossom out I suggest something for her hair...rhinestones and cloisonne...but keep it simple, like clips...she can use these on her gowns, too.

* * *

For the perennial hostess there's the dumbbell shaker. It's not what you think, but a tricky cocktail mixer in silver that causes a lot of acrobatics.

* * *

For the boudoire belle who likes to pass the time away in her dressing room, thus always being an hour late for dates, there's the moderne clock ...all glass on both sides and still the works are concealed...a gift and a hint.

* * *

For your favorite hearthrob...a chrome and enameled case that holds 100 initialed cigarettes. The case is fitted with a mirror and lifting the cigarette tray you'll find a series of compartments for rouge, lipstick, powder, etc. If you want to go spendthrift you can have them filled with the m'coy.

* * *

For the outdoor gel, a Fair Isle scarf, mittens and anklets to match. The most nobby designs can be found in your favorite men's shop. (Ah there! Conscience!)

* * *

For the lingering lass who never knows when to go home...a framed etching or Daumier print, thus killing her stock alibi.

If these don't cover your list, St. Nick help you, but write M. A. Weiss at the Boston Evening American.

Mr Boston
Braddock Must Go for Garden

By JACK CONWAY

New York, Dec. 14—Along Broadway with Mr. Boston:

Jimmy Johnston tells me the Garden will insist that Jimmy Braddock go through with his contract to defend his world's heavyweight championship for the House that Tex built.

Mr. Boston

"We have a contract on Braddock and he will have to live up to the terms of it," said Johnston. "When Braddock won the title from Baer, I advised him to ignore Louis and center his attentions on Schmeling. "Instead of doing this, Braddock, the champion, made the ridiculous move of challenging Louis. When it comes time for making the championship bout, Louis probably won't accept the challenger's end of 12½ per cent. He will figure he is just as important a ring figure as Braddock. And the champion has helped to build him up."

• • •

Jack Dempsey has become a Joe Louis booster since the latter knocked out Max Baer. Before the bout Jack told me he looked for the "Brown Bomber" to win inside of ten rounds.

• • •

Hundreds of persons waited in line to get tables at Dempsey's restaurant, just across the street from the Garden on Eighth avenue, before and after the bout. The former champion has the happy faculty of remembering faces, names and of making people feel at home.

• • •

Primo Carnera won't fight here again until the middle of May. He will sail for Italy this week to spend the Christmas holidays with his family.

• • •

Max Schmeling does not intend to make the same move of going on an exhibition tour while in this country. He knows he would not be received well in many cities. He will sail for Germany on Saturday night and will return to this country in May to begin training for his June bout with Louis.

• • •

Max Gets Bargain

Schmeling, doing his own business, drove a sharp bargain with Mike Jacobs of the Twentieth Century Club. He will receive 30 per cent of the gate and $5000 for training expenses as well as transportation for three persons from Germany. He also insisted upon an advance of $20,000 and Jacobs' guarantee that he would pay the American tax on his purse.

• • •

The Garden tried to sign Schmeling to box Braddock. Max asked for a cash advance of $2000 and when it was refused he walked over to Mike Jacobs' office and signed for the Louis bout.

• • •

Joe Jacobs has not any contract with Schmeling, but it is understood that Max will give him his usual cut of 33-1/3 per cent out of the Louis bout. Schmeling did not give Jacobs the usual manager's percentage of the purses of his European bouts. Even though Jacobs' contract was in force at the time the matches were held.

• • •

Schmeling never did worry a great deal when it came to waiting out of a contract. He had trouble with his former manager, Arthur Buelow, and also with Humbert J. Fugazy who had him under contract for a bout in Brooklyn. The Garden balled Schmeling out of his difficulties with Fugazy when it bought the contracts held by the latter on Max.

• • •

Garden Claim

The Garden says it has a claim for $6000 against Schmeling's purse in his bout with Louis for advances made during the past year. It is understood that this money was paid to Joe Jacobs to defray his expenses on trips to Europe to talk with Der Max.

• • •

Nobody was trampled in the last minute drive for tickets for the Paulino-Louis bout. The ticket agencies were unable to get the expected fancy price for ringside tickets and disposed of them at the best possible prices. The agencies were glad to get back their original investments.

• • •

Jimmy Johnston considers rankie Connolly, Johnny Buckley's new heavyweight, one of the best prospects coming this fellow. Jimmy says that with another year's experience Connolly will be ready to clash with the top flight heavyweights.

• • •

I met Dave Lumiansky of New Bedford at the Garden. Dave is manager of Jock McAvoy, British middleweight, who clashes with Babe Risko at the Garden on next Friday night. McAvoy, says Lumiansky, can make the middleweight limit of 160 pounds. Next Friday night's bout is an overweight match, but if McAvoy wins he will be given a crack at Risko's title.

PAULINO Helpless at FINISH

LOUIS MASTER OF SITUATION

By Jack Conway

New York, N. Y., Dec. 14—Bomber Joe Louis knocked the grin from Paulino Uzcudun's face after two minutes and thirty-two seconds of fighting in the fourth round of their bout before 19,945 persons at the Garden.

Louis dropped Paulino to the canvas for a count of nine with a savage right hand punch to the jaw. The courageous Basque got up at the count of nine. He was helpless and very unsteady on his feet as he faced Louis, Referee Arthur Donovan, fearing that another punch might prove fatal, stopped the uneven contest.

The Brown Bomber was complete master of the situation from the second the gong sounded for the opening of the first round until the tumult ended. He didn't hurry or take a single unnecessary chance. He went about his task in a workmanlike manner. He picked openings for his left hand and when he felt a chance to put home with a right hand shot he did so.

Louis didn't let a single punch go until he had an opening. He was fearful of injuring his hands on Paulino's head or by driving a blow against one of the Basque's elbows.

Louis Master

As a result, the bout was slow in spots, but it was always evident that Louis was master of the situation and that he would score a knockout.

Louis opened a wound over Paulino's left eye with a slashing left hook late in the third round. This injury upset Paulino a great deal. He knew better than anybody else he could not expect to go the limit with any physical handicap.

The finish had all the drama that has gone with Louis' bouts. Paulino came out of his corner in the fourth round boxing cautiously. In an effort to protect his injured eye, he began to box southpaw. He then weaved and bobbed Louis, calm and with a dead pan expression on his face, kept shuffling forward. He popped straight left hands to the Basque's face and at every opportunity drove his left to the injured optic.

Paulino pulled his arms and elbows higher in an effort to give his injured eye all possible protection. As Paulino backed against the ropes, Louis speeded up his attack. He let a terrific left hook fly to Paulino's body.

As Paulino's arms dropped from his jaw for a fraction of a second, the Brown Bomber blazed a terrific overhand right to the jaw. The blow landed flush on Paulino's jaw. Paulino crashed backwards. His head struck the floor of the ring a few feet from where I was seated in the press row. You could hear the crash of the Basque's head against the floor of the ring for some distance from the ring.

Paulino's fighting instinct caused him to struggle to his feet at the count of nine. The crowd admired Paulino's courage, but it shuddered as it saw Uzcudun stagger helplessly toward Louis.

Paulino's hands had dropped to his sides, and his jaw was wide open. Louis shifted forward, left hand up, right hand ready for the kill. It was at this point in the bout that Referee Donovan stepped in and halted the tussle.

Paulino at that made a better showing against Louis than did Baer. He was there trying and absorbed considerable punishment before the "Brown Bomber" scored his kayo.

In the second round, Louis caught up with Paulino with a looping right to the jaw. The force of the blow knocked Paulino back a foot but he managed to stay on his feet.

In the first and second rounds Louis made his chief play with left jabs and hooks to the jaw. He didn't let everything he had go with these punches as he didn't want to risk injury to his hands.

Paulino cut loose a few times with wild left hooks to the body or overhand rights to the jaw, but when he did he was nailed by heavy left hooks to the jaw or short rights to the jaw.

It was Louis' left hand attack which opened the wound over Paulino's left eye in the third round. It was then merely a matter of how long mora courage could hold off one of the greatest punchers the ring has known.

Louis didn't hurry his attack in the fourth round. He went about the task at hand with cold deliberation. When he finally got the opening for his right, he let everything he had go behind the blow. It was the only time during the bout that Louis forsed his best Sunday sock.

After Paulino has been assisted to his corner, it was found that the Loq a right hand had driven a tooth through the Basque's lip. It was after necessary to stitch the injured lip.

Der Max Sees Go

Max Schmeling, who will fight Louis in June, saw the bout from a ringside seat directly behind this writer. As Paulino was receiving first aid in his corner, I asked Schmeling what he thought of Louis.

"Louis is a good fighter," said Max.

"How will you fare with him?" I asked.

"I shall beat him," replied the German.

The look on the faces of Schmeling and Joe Jacobs, his manager, was not one of confidence.

Unless a miracle happens, Louis will knock out Schmeling when they meet in New York next June.

James J. Braddock, world's champion, also saw the bout from a ringside pew. He expressed a desire to meet Louis in a title bout. Louis is a cinch to knock out Braddock.

In his dressing room, Louis was asked if Paulino had been his softest fight.

"Levinsky was easier," replied the socker with the dead pan expression.

All heavyweights look much alike to Louis. He is the one fighter who is ready to meet all comers.

Louis will leave for Havana, Cuba, within a few days to get ready for his knockout of Isidoro Gastanaga on December 20. When he journeys to Chicago for a tussle with Charley Retzlaff after which he takes a ring layoff until he clashes with Schmeling in New York next June.

The 19,945 cash customers paid a gross of $128,394 to see the bout. The total gate reached $168,887. Paulino received 20 per cent of the net and Louis 40 per cent.

The spectacular knockout gave the crowd a thrill and made up for what otherwise was a dull scrap.

The bout also "doped." Louis won inside of six rounds as I predicted he would, and with the referee halting the contest.

FIRST ROUND

SECOND ROUND

Louis sent three light lefts to the face. Louis dropped a left to the body. Louis sent five straight lefts to the face and backed Paulino into the corner. Paulino sent a right to the head and took a right to the jaw in return. Paulino hooked his left to the body and was nailed on the chin with a short right. A right bounced off Paulino's jaw and forced the Basque back. Louis landed with a right hand uppercut and then a left to the jaw. Louis drove a straight left to the face. ALL LOUIS.

THIRD ROUND

Louis sent a light left in the face. Louis scored with two more lefts to the face. Paulino missed a left hook to the body and was nailed with a right to the jaw. Louis cut a short right to the head. Louis sent four lefts to the face. The Bomber sent four more lefts to the face and took a left to the body. Louis jabbed with his left and then crossed his right to the jaw. Paulino landed with right to jaw and Louis came back with a fierce right-hand uppercut to the jaw. Louis cut Paulino's left eye with a smashing left hook. LOUIS' ROUND.

FOURTH ROUND

Louis started pecking away with his left at Paulino's bad eye. Paulino started boxing southpaw in an effort to protect himself. Louis continued to punch away at Paulino's injured optic. Louis missed with a right hand uppercut for the jaw. Paulino drove a right to the head and then took a right to the head in return. Louis missed a left hook to the jaw. Louis dropped Paulino with right to the jaw. Paulino was up at count of nine. Louis wins. Referee Arthur Donovan stopped the bout as Paulino staggered helplessly around the ring.

Jack Gibbons Wins in N. Y. Ring Prelim

New York, N. Y., Dec. 14—Jack Gibbons of St. Paul, son of Mike Gibbons, made his New York ring debut by outscoring Billy Ketchell of Philadelphia, in one of the six-round bouts on the Paulino-Louis card.

The youthful member of the Gibbons family has some of his dad's boxing class. It is evident he has been well schooled in the ring game. He had things his own way for four rounds, but tired badly during the last two sessions.

Tizer Al Lewis of Chicago, outpointed Jimmy Murray of New York in a four-round go. Nathan Mann of New Haven, outpointed Nick Masters of New York over a six-round route.

Max Marek of Chicago, won the decision from Joe Lipps of Washington in six rounds.

WORK Builds Ice STARS

PRACTISE HARD, SAYS JAFFEE

This is the fifth of a series of articles on ice skating by Irving Jaffee, holder of three Olympic championships and the world's professional title, designed to aid all entrants in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser Silver Skates Derby to be held at a Boston park location on Sunday, January 26. Readers wishing to obtain any additional information write to Irving Jaffee, Boston American, who will answer in these columns.

By Irving Jaffee

Eddie Shore, Jack Dempsey, Babe Ruth, Gene Sarazen and many other champions of the present day had to begin at the bottom of the ladder.

They were at one time just plain novices in their particular specialty.

One is a novice as long as he has that lack of confidence, which will lick anyone in any line of sports.

If you continually try to improve your skating by constant practise, watching and, wherever possible, skating with those more expert than you are, you can't help but develop the necessary poise and self determined confidence.

You is as well as licked before you start if you don't set your mind on practising as diligently as possible, and that in your heart you feel that you have trained seriously for the events you have entered.

Don't forget that when you're out on that ice, waiting for the start ing gun to bark, it is up to you only. Those days that you shirked in your training will be missed when you feel that you're not in the same physical condition as your rival, who trained more seriously than you did.

Vital Orders

Here are some important points for all of you first-race novice skaters, which may take you out of that class if you practise. Check up on your skates and shoes, so that they fit you properly. Snug, but not too loose or tight. Have a sharp skating edge, done at least a week before you skate and the day of a race. If you can't do it yourself, have it done by an expert.

Girl skaters should wear loose fitting clothes, so there will be no hindrance to proper striding and stretching of legs. Fix your shoes with laces that are soft and pliable, none of the bulky, cutting, heavy cowhide type.

Don't bind your shoes about the ankles too tight. This will hinder the circulation of your blood. Keep cool and don't be too overanxious at the start of a race, they are not won at the start, only at the finish line. Conserve speed and energy for the important finish of the race.

Concentrate on the race, keep your eyes and ears open and don't be caught napping. Give everything you have at the finish, don't never look back, go all the way till you hit the line and then coole anything, ever. Don't keep standing around on the open ice before your event is called, keep warm and your body in loose, supple condition, before and after the race. Always skate clean and fairly, win or lose.

CAT Louis Beats TURTLE

PAULINO HAS NO CHANCE

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1935, by International Service)

New York Dec 14—You were reminded of a cat poking gazingly at a mud turtle for three rounds of the fight between Joe Louis of Detroit and Paulino Uzcudun, the old ring warhorse from Spain, in Madison Square Garden last night.

The turtle which was Paulino, kept his chin in his shell, poking it out occasionally to see what was going on.

The cat which was Louis dabbed out with a soft paw to bring forth the disappearing chin, but failed to catch up with it until the thirty-two seconds of the fourth round have elapsed (Then zip!

The turtle fails to get his chin back under cover in time, and Joe Louis' right hand shoots out with the speed of a rattlesnake's strike.

Down goes Paulino Uzcudun for the first time in his long pugilistic career, his round head hitting the canvased floor with a terrific thump and half his "store" teeth flying out of his mouth.

The old Spaniard ends flat on his back, and 19,000 spectators, who pay paid $128,574 expecting to see the very thing happen, spring to their feet, fairly gasping at the suddenness of it all.

They know it is the finish, though Paulino reaches out with his glove, right hand, catches hold of the lower strand of the ropes within a few feet of the nose of his reporter, and somehow hauls himself to a squatting posture.

REFEREE COUNTS

Referee Arthur Donovan, somewhat startled by the sudden explosion of the fistic bomb, rushes across the ring to take up the count with Jack Denning, the counting-out timekeeper.

You can see that Paulino reaches for the ropes by sheer instinct, his hand is fumbling and shaking, as he finally locates the strand. He squats there dumbly, his little eyes blinking in his head as he looks around for the referee—again more by instinct than anything else.

As Denning taps off seven on the floor of the ring, Paulino manages to get to his feet.

His mouth is bleeding badly from an inside cut. There is another cut over one eye. But the heart that beats in the breast of Paulino is as courageous as ever, and he puts up his hands, feebly, and turns to face the leering Bomber, destiny who is advancing from his corner.

DONOVAN STEPS IN

The instant Paulino hits the floor, Louis trots back to that corner, apparently fearful that the Spaniard will never get up again, Indeed that is one expected Paulino to beat the count.

The instant he is within striking distance again, Louis lashes at Paulino with a left hook, and is about to drive his murderous right to Paulino's head again when Donovan steps between them, and ends the fight with the first knockout ever recorded against Paulino in probably 200 tough battles.

The referee in Donovan does not stop it before he does. He lets Louis blaze punches at Paulino that should have ended the barbarian's career forever, had they landed.

Many of the spectators who pack Madison Square Garden to the walls to see this fight are crying "No fair" at the end of the round.

They come confident that they will see exactly what takes place—the knockout of Paulino when their expectation is being fulfilled, and they are not alone in this, the spectators in the Roman arenas of old. They do not turn then thumbs down signal against Paulino in the Basque country. Instead, they plead for mercy for him.

NOT BREATHING HARD

As Donovan goes to the ring, Paulino's handlers leap into the ring, and surround the tottering human hulk that has gone the way the pugilistic wars so many times in the past and survived all the glove-fire. They lead him over to his corner, Paulino mumbling expostulations.

He does not quite comprehend what has happened to him. They ease him to his stool and he sits there, breathing not at all hard, while over in the other corner stands Louis, the fistic wonder of the age, not even breathing hard.

At the ringside, as this is going on, all two big men staring wideeyed at the mouth brown figure of the twenty-one-year-old Detroit boy, and probably wondering.

There are James J. Braddock, heavyweight champion of the world, and a predecessor, Jack Dempsey, of Germany, the latter matched to meet Louis next spring.

The German is as white as a sheet when he was asked what he thinks of Louis. He says

"He won't hit me with that punch."

Coaches Elect Whelan President

Tom Whelan of Lynn English was elected president of the Massachusetts High School Coaches association at a meeting this morning at the Hotel Continental, Cambridge. Whelan succeeds Tom Hines, of Brookline High.

Remaining officers chosen by the group of coaches included Warren McQuirk of Malden, vice-president; Dennis Gildea of Everett, treasurer; and Charles Linnehan, Somerville, secretary.

PAYROLL RISES HELD NEED TO CUT TAXES

Rehabilitation of Massachusetts industries, with resulting increase in the size of payrolls, is the only way out of the tax muddle in this state in the opinion of former Mayor George J. Bates of Salem.

Reorganization of the industries of Massachusetts will solve the tax problem, Mr. Bates believes.

"The plan of the special legislative commission to increase taxes $17,000,000 in Massachusetts during the coming year will be only a drop in the bucket," said Salem's ex-mayor, who won acclaim for his economical management of the Witch City's financial affairs.

"The big job that confronts the people of this state is the rehabilitation of the working man. Put men to work—not on federal payrolls but on industrial payrolls; that's the way out.

FUNDAMENTAL PROBLEM

"The industries of the state must be reorganized and saved. We have a fundamental problem to solve. We must get men off welfare aid and relief work and put them back to work in industry. The tax problem will be solved if we do that. This is a matter of vital importance to the well-being of all the people of Massachusetts and everybody should help solve it.

"We are fundamentally affected by the industrial payroll of the state. In 1920 the payrolls of Massachusetts industries, according to official figures, reached $900,000,000. In 1934 these payrolls had shrunk to $400,000,000. These figures do not include public utility payrolls.

WELFARE MOUNTS

"Lessened payrolls affects the entire fabric. Welfare costs have mounted tremendously as a result of the payroll shrinkages. In 1921 the 39 cities of Massachusetts paid out only $2,500,000 for public welfare. In 1933 this figure in these same cities had mounted to $24,000,000.

"In 1934, the year the federal government came in with the PWA and put $25,000,000 into welfare relief in this state, the same 39 cities spent $23,000,000 out of their own treasuries for welfare relief.

"In 1935 the federal government has put $45,000,000 into relief work in this state and based upon the figures for the first nine months the 39 cities will spend $25,000,000 in welfare relief this year.

70 MILLIONS RELIEF

"That makes a total of $70,000,000 for relief in this state for the current year.

"From 1921 to the present time the population increase in Massachusetts was only 7 per cent and the cost of living now is less than it was in 1921, so that the jump from $2,500,000 in relief in 1921 to $70,000,000 in 1935 cannot be attributed to those two factors. They are due to decreased payrolls.

"The problem then is clearly one of rehabilitation of industry and the working man—not through welfare relief measures.

"During this period the savings of a lifetime have been wiped out in many instances, as is clearly proven by the fact that the amount of property in foreclosure held by banking institutions in Massachusetts has increased from $1,600,000 in 1925 to $155,000,000 this year."

SAVE INDUSTRY

"It is clear that the problem before us is to make every effort to rehabilitate the industrial life of the state. Industry must be given a chance to prosper. The hopes and aspirations of our people depend on that prosperity and every effort must be made by those interested in the well-being of this Commonwealth to assist in this rehabilitation.

"There must be a keen realization on the part of the people that industries are vital to the welfare of our communities. There must be a better understanding between the employer and the employee. Bad industrial relationship between employer and the employee creates an atmosphere in which it is difficult to encourage new industry and results in continued economic disorder.

"There must be an aroused public opinion so that some method will be devised to bring about a solution of the ever present industrial controversies."

PENTHOUSE WEDDING

Mrs. Marjorie Hutton to Be Bride

New York, Dec. 14 (AP)—Joseph E. Davies, 59-year-old attorney, of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Marjorie Post Hutton, heiress and philanthropist, will be married tomorrow, friends said today.

It will be a simple ceremony in Mrs. Hutton's penthouse apartment off Fifth avenue, with a few "old and close friends" present.

Among the guests will be Billie Burke, actress and her daughter Patricia Ziegfeld.

Mrs. Hutton, whose twenty year marriage to Edward F. Hutton, New York financier, ended in divorce last September, declined to give any details about the wedding in advance.

A spokesman for her said:

"Mrs. Hutton is not a movie actress. She prefers to do things quietly."

Davies arrived in New York yesterday for the wedding which friends said would be followed by an informal reception and a wedding trip to Nassau on the bride's yacht.

Mrs. Hutton inherited millions from her late father C. W. Post of Battle Creek, Mich.

Davies and his first wife, the former Emlen Knight of Ashland, Wis., ended their 33-year marriage with divorce last September.

Queen Wilhelmina Honors Dr. Auer

The Honorable H. J. E. Van Oosten, consul of the Netherlands at Boston, today made official announcement of the appointment of Dr. J. A. C. Fagginger Auer, professor of theology and philosophy at Harvard University and Tufts College, as officer in the order of Oranje Nassau.

This honor was bestowed upon Professor Auer by Her Netherland Majesty, Queen Wilhelmina, for extended services in this country.

Professor Dr. Auer is the first resident of New England who has been decorated by Her Majesty.

South End Boy Injured by Auto

Roy Cavanaugh, 12, of Gray street, South End, today is on the danger list at City Hospital, where he was taken after a cab, operated by Walter C. Foster of Columbus avenue, struck him while he was crossing Boylston street at Clarendon.

CURLEY GAINS NEW SUPPORT

Governor James M. Curley today was supported from two sources repudiating the attack on him by Eugene Brady, self-styled president of the Young Democratic Club of Berkshire County.

Brady, onetime Pittsfield bartender, now a federal appointee, demanded from Washington that Curley withdraw from politics and belittled the Curley-for-Senator movement.

James P. McAndrews telegraphed the Governor that Brady was no longer president of any Young Democratic group in the county.

North Adams Councilman T. William Lewis also wired support to the organization to Governor Curley.

George E. Richards Of Post Staff Weds

George E. Richards, a member of the editorial staff of the Boston Post, and Miss Jane Pearson, daughter of Mrs. Myra F. Pearson, of 56 Charlesgate East, were married today at noon by the Rev. Robert L. Webb, D.D., pastor of the First Baptist Church in Dorchester. They will be at home after February 1 at 20 South Munroe terrace, Dorchester.

Freed on Auto Charge

Lowell, Dec. 14 (AP)—Professor Allen B. Partridge, 34, of the University of New Hampshire was acquitted in district court today on a charge of driving to endanger in the death Nov. 27 of Mrs. Rose Lightman, 63.

JIMMY FOXX IN RADIO SALUTE TO BOSTON

By N. F. T.

There's a treat for fair in store for alert national pastime rooters who likewise bear in mind to tune toward the powerful WBZ-WBZA wave this evening from 6 15 to 6 30 p. m.

Jimmy Foxx, the newly acquired Red Sox husky, has a special greeting to voice from down Philadelphia way. He will do so at the above time.

N. F. T.

All of which comes to pass as a result of no little exercise and enterprise on the part of your in hand favorite evening newspaper. Accordingly, ye air activity scribe here mustn't forget to meet the sports writing ace, Austen Lake, at the WBZ studios along toward 6 o'clock. Austen will verbally switch the doings off to Philly, where another topnotch American and Advertiser correspondent, Alan Frazer by name, has the heavy hitter at Station KYW, ready and waiting to say hello to Hub baseball followers.

Full co-operation, enthusiastically extended by the National Broadcasting Company head men, meaning John Holman, John McNamara and George Harder, likewise figures in the voice of Foxx wafting through 5 states and into our midst. A direct NBC line across Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut and Rhode Island, not to mention Massachusetts, brings about the result to be heard this evening.

It's a busy night at Yankee Network studios. The annual Disabled Veterans Christmas Remembrance Committee plans a special gala presentation (WNAC) due to extend between 9 30 and 11 o'clock.

Governor James M. Curley, Rev. Michael Ahearn, Mary Young, Bayard Tuckerman and Brig. General Charles H. Cole are to be the principal speakers.

Roy Harlow, directing executive at the Hotel Buckminster studios, will officiate as master of ceremonies, with leading artists known to the Boston air audience taking part. Music is to be provided by the big and well known Ives concert band.

It's designed to aid in making the holiday season merry for men in Veterans' hospitals, that the more fortunate of us may not permit their sacrifices to be forgotten.

$965,414,177 Due, $230,453 to Be Paid

Washington, Dec. 14 (INS)—The big parade of the debt defaulting nations of Europe was under full swing at the State Department today.

Armed with a flock of regrets but not a dime to spare, the debtor nations' diplomats were trudging through the corridors of the State Department to inform Uncle Sam that the situation remained "unchanged" insofar as making any payment on the $965,414,177.54 due tomorrow.

Unchanged meant outright default with the sole exception of the little republic of Finland, which, as usual, had notified this government of its intention to pay in full and in cash its Dec. 15th installment of $230,453.

The current installments due from the debtor nations totalled $153,051,301.24. The amounts on which they already were in arrears due to past defaults totaled $810,362,876.30.

Ptomaine Fells 41 in CCC Camp

Los Angeles, Dec. 14 (INS)—Suffering from ptomaine poisoning, 41 CCC camp workers were ill here today, 17 being confined to hospitals in critical condition.

The youths were stricken after partaking of a specially planned dinner at one of the camps. Physicians said they believed the workers had eaten tainted fish.

Adela St. Johns Goes Under Knife

Mineola, N. Y., Dec. 14 (INS)—Adela Rogers St. Johns, well known writer and novelist, was recovering in Nassau County Hospital today from a serious operation performed yesterday. Dr. Butmann, who performed the operation, said the writer's condition was good.

Joel O. Cheek, Coffee King, Dead

Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 14 (AP)—Joel Owsley Cheek, 83, who built up a great coffee industry in the United States on the strength of advertising and his belief that "the harder business is to get, the easier it is to hold," died today in the home of his son, Leon T. Cheek.

40 P. C. of Brewery Income to Taxes

A tax levy of 40 per cent of the gross income of the Harvard Brewing Company in the past 50 years was disclosed by Theodore Hoffacker today following his re-election as president and chairman of the board.

W. F. Baumann

He revealed that federal, state and municipal taxes, which have taken that percentage of the company's income, are greatly responsible for the high cost of malt beverages to the consumer.

Vice-President William F. Baumann will continue as general sales manager as a result of the re-election of all officers and Brewmaster Dr. Richard H. P. Juerst, another vice-president, will continue to supervise production.

Newspaper Unit Christmas Tree

A Christmas tree party and marionette show, under the auspices of the Boston Newspapermen's Unit, No. 305, American Legion Auxiliary, will be held Sunday afternoon, December 15, at 2:30 p. m., at the post headquarters, 256 Washington street, Boston. The president had arranged to have a performance by the ERA marionettes, which will be equally as entertaining for adults as for children.

New Spanish Cabinet

Madrid, Dec. 14 (AP)—After six days of cabinet crisis, Spain gained a new government today headed by Manuel Portela Valladares, former minister of the interior.

FACTS

Washington, Dec. 14—President Roosevelt, in his campaign for election, promised to reduce government expenses by 25 per cent.

The largest amount of taxes ever collected from the American people to run the national government was $400 million dollars in 1920. The income of the American people that year was 67,000 million dollars.

To balance the budget this year, the Roosevelt Administration would have to collect 7150 million dollars in taxes. The income of the American people this year is estimated at 51,000 million dollars.

Holiday Bargain Offered by 'L'

The Boston Elevated Railway announces that during the balance of the Christmas shopping season, commencing December 16 and continuing to and including Christmas Day itself, children under five years of age and under 14 will have the benefit of the five-cent fare for a single ride anywhere on the Elevated system, except during the rush hours on week-days.

On Sunday, December 22 and on Christmas Day, the five-cent fare for children will be in effect for the entire day.

Sentenced to Hang for Killing G-Man

Indianapolis, Dec. 14 (AP)—George W. Barrett, Kentucky mountaineer, today was sentenced to hang in the Marion County jail March 24 for the murder of a federal agent.

The death sentence is the first imposed under a 1934 law of Congress which provided federal court trial for killers of federal agents with hanging as the penalty.

SELECTS Butterworth for Horse Hit Lead

By GEORGE HOLLAND

George Abbott wants Charles Butterworth to play the part of Erwin Trowbridge, the meek little greeting-card writer who has a genius for picking horses, when "Three Men on a Horse" goes into pictures next year.

As Mr Abbott, who wrote "Three Men On a Horse" in collaboration with John Cecil Holm and directed the play, has shown again in the case of his new New York hit, "Boy Meets Girl" that he has a genius for perfect casting, it is likely that Warner Bros will be guided by his selection

George Holland

• • •

Mr Butterworth would make an ideal Erwin, in the opinion of this department. One of the drollest and most intelligent comedians in Hollywood, the funny-faced Charles would get the opportunity he has been awaiting since he landed on the West Coast in 1930

• • •

"Three Men On a Horse" holds the stage alone in Boston next week, and the play's chances to hang up a record at the Plymouth Theater are becoming brighter by the week. With the week before Christmas safely encountered, "Three Men On a Horse" will enter the bright holiday season with a decidedly brisk demand for seats in evidence

• • •

Mary Young has chosen a week from tonight as the opening date for "Ceiling Zero," the melodrama about the operation of an airport

G. Albert Smith, who played one of the important parts in the play's New York run, is directing, under Miss Young's supervision. Edgar Mason will play the role of Dizzy in which John Litel scored a hit in New York. This part will give Mr. Mason his best opportunity to show his acting skill since he joined Miss Young's company at the Copley Theater

Philip Ober, Eric Kalkhurst and Priscilla Fortescue are in the cast

• • •

The latter part of next week will see the usual ferment of a world premiere brewing at the Boston Opera House The new "Ziegfeld Follies," which is scheduled to open Christmas night, will begin to be assembled by Friday

Jean Harlow Plays Wife Role in 'Absolute Quiet'

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Dec. 14—So really appalling is the dearth of good screen stories that there is genuine rivalry among the producers to get first peep at the galley proofs of forthcoming books. Sometimes the picture is made simultaneously with the release of the story.

In the case of "Absolute Quiet," a novel which MGM bought from George F Worts in manuscript form, the picture is very likely to be made before it starts serially in a current magazine 'Absolute Quiet," the story of a powerful financier and the beautiful wife of one of his employes, goes into production early next year. Jean Harlow plays the wife and again without the famous platinum locks for Jean has definitely decided to keep her hair its natural color

Dick Grace, stunt flier and writer, has turned out a thriller in "The Devil's Squadron" which Columbia promptly snapped up Richard Dix has been borrowed from radio for the chief heroic role which Harry Cohn felt suited him down to the ground Karen Morley will emote opposite Richard as the object of his screen affections. This "Devil's Squadron" is not a future event but next week it will be deep in production with Erle Kenton handling the directorial end.

Chatter in Hollywood: Even Edgar Guest has learned that it takes time to get a picture going. He has been here two months without so much as a camera turning but he hasn't been idle. In that time he has kept 51 speaking engagements, preached two sermons and delivered his weekly broadcast

His first picture, "You Can't Lose," he is promised, will really get under way early next year. When his son arrives here to spend Christmas he will get a real Hollywood welcome with Mrs. Guest wearing a red wig and Edgar in a typical Clark Gable turtleneck sweater and beret.

Snapshots of Hollywood

H. G. WELLS' naive comment "I have met MARY PICKFORD for keeps" interesting the fast-growing list of WELLS fans: JAMES HILTON and his attractive wife introduced to a small party of 10, at FRANCES MARION'S house where they are visiting: FRANCES GOLDWYN in black velvet, looking exactly like a Burne-Jones drawing, voted by three women present, Hollywood's most beautiful matron; MRS. CLARK GABLE remains in Hollywood until April; then she may go abroad with CONSTANCE COLLIER; BUDDY ROGERS delayed in his London picture making, won't be here for Christmas as he planned; BILLY MAUCH, ten-year-old radio actor from New York, wins the much-tested role of Anthony Adverse as a boy; That's all today. See you Monday!

Star Films At Scollay

The new pictures on the Scollay screen include "Mary Burns Fugitive," with Sylvia Sidney and Melvyn Douglas in the leading roles, and a return down-town engagement of one of the season's most popular pictures, "Top Hat," featuring Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers.

Playing the title role in "Mary Burns, Fugitive" Sylvia Sidney gives one of her finest performances of the year as an innocent girl, hunted by the law and relentlessly pursued by a former sweetheart gangster, Alan Baxter Melvyn Douglas, as the wealthy, brilliant scientist, plays the leading role opposite Miss Sidney.

Other players in this dramatic thriller include Pert Kelton and Wallace Ford.

Sterling Entertainers on Boston's Rialto

Priscilla Fortescue will have a featured role in "Ceiling Zero," at the Copley.

Mickey Braatz is just about the speediest little performer Club Mayfair patrons have ever seen. A total of 75 somersaults without stopping in one of her featured stunts.

Several concerts to which the public is invited will be given by music schools.

This evening Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston University Symphony Orchestra in its first concert of the season to be given in the auditorium of the School of Education at 29 Exeter street

Tomorrow noon the New England Conservatory of Music proffers an hour of choral music by the choral class in Jordan Hall at 12.05.

Tomorrow evening the Longy School of Music, will give an open house concert at 44 Church street, Cambridge. The program will be given by Frederic Delzell, pianist, and the Very Trio.

The New England Conservatory Orchestra, Wallace Goodrich, conductor, will give a Christmas program on Wednesday evening in Jordan Hall at 8 15. Tickets may be obtained without charge upon application to the Conservatory.

Warners' Stars Score On Met Screen

By HARRIS MORGAN

Bringing a new twist to the cycle of operatic pictures, Warner Brothers let fall a galaxy of stars on the Metropolitan screen this week in a production aptly entitled "Stars on Broadway."

Skillfully combining the new trend in the cinema to grand opera with the favorites of the popular music-loving world, Director William Keighley has contrived a well-balanced film with the aid of an excellent cast, headed by Pat O Brien, Jane Froman and James Melton

But Frank McHugh, ace picture stealer in the Warner roster, has walked off with almost all the film honors by his hilarious characterization of that species of Broadway known as a song plugger.

• • •

Al McGillevray (Pat O'Brien), a Broadway agent without any clients and labelled a flop by the wiseacres of Forty-second street, discovers a real find in a porter with a marvelous tenor voice

As a porter and a studious singer Ian King (James Melton) is a very pleasing young man but as a successful crooner he develops an enlarged cranium and passion for liquor that sends him as quickly down the rungs in the Broadway ladder of fame as he ascended them

Not all Broadway agents are fair-weather friends and Al helps his tenor to a new start and sees him come back as the leading singer in the Metropolitan Opera company and achieve the goal he first desired.

• • •

James Melton sings "Carry Me Back to the Lone Prairie," selections from Verdi's Aida, and a duet with Jane Froman, "At Your Service, Madame." His melodious tenor voice is a worthy addition to the screen and this film is bound to increase his popularity with the motion picture fans

That Boston favorite, E. E. Clive, who once held the stage at the Copley Theater here, is seen for a few minutes in a butler scene and there is no need to say that he performs ably.

• • •

Lop 10 or 12 minutes off the Met stage show and you have one of the fastest and funniest seen for a long time

In fact the longer the stage show goes on the better it gets. Its poor opening hinders the entire setup and your reviewer thinks that the Libonati trio should stick to their dance routine and throw away their xylophones for their musical arrangements are not good

• • •

Al Norman and his two stooges, who, he says, are his brothers, brightens whatever we may have found wrong with the stage production by his comedy work

Two acrobats, Prosper and Maret, close the bill with a set of stunts, done with the greatest of ease and grace which belies their difficult nature.

In Revival

Marie Murray, contralto, will be one of the principals in the Handel and Hydn Society's revival of "Messiah."

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

Woburn is represented in the column today, folks, with this addition to our Floydian collection of adventurers into the realm of art. It was sent in to us by John Devlin of 41 Sturgis street.

John has employed a rather unique style in producing the head of the intrepid head-line hunter. Many thanks, Artist Devlin!

How about the cartoons, boys and girls, instead of all these sober, serious interpretations of the scintillating Floyd? He can take it!

The Editor.

Fish Catches Man

New Yorker Fights Death Battle With Giant Ray

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

And did you know that your old Headline Hunter had gone angler on you? Yes, sir, I've got a big stuffed sailfish over my desk. I hooked that seven-foot baby, weighing 67 pounds, with light tackle in the Gulf Stream off the Florida coast, while on my vacation in Miami Beach.

It took me an hour to land the son-of-a-gun and old Isaac Walton Gibbons had sore hands for a week afterward. Never mind what luck I've had since then. I'm not talking about that. But what I'm talking about is the story of a real fisherman and his battle with a giant ray that made my fish look like a minnow.

ELMER E. GARRETSON of 18-20 West 25th street, New York city, is the gent's name who caught the ray and landed the 10-spot today. Elmer was engaged some years ago to open up a fisherman's camp on Soldier's Key—an island some 15 miles off Miami—in waters that abound with all kinds of tropical fish, both large and small. I guess the place is about the best fishing ground in this country and there's no limit to their size.

One day while Elmer was idly glancing at the water from the dock he saw a ray—as big as a barn door—loafing around the coral channel near the key. That was just about the biggest thing Elmer had ever seen swimming and he decided to try and catch it.

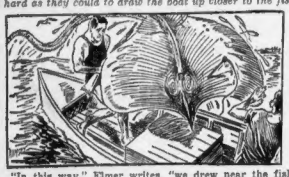

Now a ray is a mean customer. Besides being a tremendous size, the fish—which is a sort of sea bat with enormous flippers—is armed with sharp, long, bone daggers. These daggers are operated by the tail of the fish and can make a frightful wound.

But Elmer had a reputation to sustain and he wanted that giant ray. So he got out his small motor driven dory, packed his rifle, harpoons and lines aboard and, with a guide, Charlie Haggerman, started after him.

Well, sir, Elmer spotted the monster lying still on the bottom and, standing up in the boat, made his throw. Zowie! The harpoon aped true to the mark and buried itself in a ton or so of "filet de sole."

Wham! Mister Big Fish, when he felt that harpoon go into his neck, gave his flippers the throttle and hit for the open sea like a racing car! The line shot out so fast that it smoked! In a jiffy the dory aped through the channel and into deep water.

Elmer didn't want to lose that precious line and he didn't want to lose that fish. So he and Haggerman pulled as hard as they could to draw the boat up closer to the fish.

"In this way," Elmer writes, "we drew near the fish. To my delight, he rose to the surface, so I grabbed a rifle and got set in the bow of the boat for a shot. He was so big I couldn't miss. I drew a quick bead on him. And then it happened!

"Before I could shoot the ray turned and with a tremendous flap of its kite-like wings jumped clean out of the water at us! The pull on the line drew the boat under the fish with such force that sent Haggerman sailing through the air into the water.

"And it's a good thing it did because the next second the giant black mass fell with a crash right on the boat! The boat deck crumpled in as though it were made of cardboard instead of hard mahogany, and the giant form seemed to cover the entire boat.

"I fell backward from the shock but not fast enough.

"An agonizing pain shot through my leg and I fell prone with four of the ray's daggers imbedded above my knee. These daggers are from six to eight inches long, sharp as a needle and lined with saw-like teeth.

"The daggers, I saw with horror, were inches in my leg! One of them had gone clear through and I could see its jagged point protruding on the other side!

"The next thing I knew I was being dragged over the side of the boat ATTACHED TO THE FISH! I managed to grab one of the hooks on the side as the fish slipped into the water.

"Haggerman was now hanging on the other side of the boat and only this kept it from capsizing. But the ray didn't stop there. He started flailing me with his powerful tail as my body hung over the side in the water!

"I thought my arms would be pulled out of their sockets. They would have been had the boat been tied, but as it was I was the low line and pulled the boat after me. Haggerman meanime had climbed into the boat. As the ray beat me with his huge wings I begged Haggerman for a knife. He couldn't find one but gave me a pair of pliers.

"While I held on to the boat with one hand and Haggerman, too, held on to me, with the other hand I forced the pliers in between the fish and my leg and one by one broke off the daggers at their base. The pain was terrific. It was like operating on one's own leg, but I had to do it.

"Finally the last one snapped and I was pulled into the boat more dead than alive. A tourniquet saved me from bleeding to death. Haggerman then attached the fish line to the anchor an threw it overboard and we were free."

Boy, oh, boy! What an experience. Elmer was "free," but h had to pull those poisonous daggers out of his leg before the killed him. As the boat staggered back to the key, half full o water, he took the pliers and, using sea water as an antiseptic pulled the jagged darts out of his leg with his own hands!

To me that part of the job was the hardest of all. Elmer was in the hospital for two weeks and it was a year before he could walk properly and the worst of it, he says, was that the sharks ate up most of the ray before the other fishermen could rescue him. What remained was only some three or four hundred pounds of fish. That's all!

And so to bed. Look me up tomorrow on this page, boys and girls. You won't regret it.

Floyd Gibbons, himself an adventurer of note, is never too busy to listen to the other fellow's experience. DEPOSITS GAIN

Savings BANKS Report

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

The high per capita savings account record of Newburyport is the particular feature of today's report of the Savings Banks Association of Massachusetts.

However, the northern Bay Bay State city has consistently held this honor during the entire period in which the figures have been published and it is not surprising that she again wins top place.

The per capita havings figure for Newburyport this year shows a gain over last year of $12.16 to $1206.68. Since there must be a few of the more than 15,000 citizens who do not have savings accounts the average would be much higher if confined to depositors only.

* * *

The savings account roll call of Massachusetts cities also finds Salem again in second place while Boston pulls up to third. The Witch City averages savings in mutual banks of $996.11. Boston follows with $848.11. For us there is an element of surprise in the listing despite the fact it has happened so often it is taken by bankers as a matter of course. Both of the top cities have had their share of industrial woes. Fires, strikes and migrations must have left their mark. Yet savings march forward. Even though it is pointed out that people who formerly resided in these cities not only left their savings accounts behind them, but, in many instances, continued to add to them, we find it hard to understand how the actual dollar wealth per capita grows so steadily.

* * *

Notebook: Practically all of the high priced or highly speculative issues—listed two weeks ago as having recorded minor downtrend signals—are now in a definite downtrend . . . New bases must be set up before repurchases are advisable . . . Selling of the blue chips, we are given to understand, by almost everyone we meet, is for investment trust accounts . . . If so those who were worried about a permanently diminished supply of these may say farewell to their troubles for the present at least.

* * *

The market is teetering on the edge of a week or ten day reaction. The lower limits for the present dip, carefully delineated here yesterday, are not far away. Caution is the watchword and traders are warned to forget that "delay in buying may miss the bottom" psychology. A few points more on the upside is usuall well worth the price. Such buying ordinarily is based on reliable indications of a real bottom as contrasted to an imaginary one. Personally we will take out time before attempting to decide whether or not a reversal has set in.

* * *

Shorts: The Associated Press bond averages hold well and if they continue to do so will contribute some of the support we need to go forward with new buying . . . The industrial stock average from the same source is in a bearish position . . . So is the utility compilation . . . The rail and composite indexes on the other hand are still registering for the bull cause . . . But by the narrow ... of margins . . . And some of the writer's personal week... group averages have turned downward this week . . . A time for care in market matters.

MARKET DULL

Price TONE Steady

New York, Dec. 14—Pressure relaxed in today's brief stock market session as a few of the metals, oils, motors and specialties recovered moderately.

There were still plenty of skeptics in the board rooms, however, and the sidelines continued attractive for many traders. Dullness marked the two-hour proceedings. The close was steady.

Chartists were far from discouraged with the action of the list. It was suggested that the erratic tendencies of leading stocks in the past week may have been due partly to year-end factors and partly to the necessity for ... solidation after long adv... The silver mystery wa... from solution as ever, b... parently had become ... conspicuous as a market ...or. Wheat reacted ...r its yesterday's spurt and cotton pointed lower. Trends in the bond department were indefinite. Some rail liens sagged and Italian obligations were again a bit soft.

Share gainers of fractions to around a point or more included American Smelting, International Nickel, U. S. Smelting, Chrysler, Case, Westinghouse, Atlantic Refining, Houdaille-Hershey, Marlin-Rockwell, American Telephone and Western Union.

Rails Narrow

Continental came back about 2 points and American Can rallied around a point. American Type Founders preferred got up about 6 points on optimism over the company's reorganization plans. The rails and steels were narrow. American Tobacco "B," Public Service of New Jersey and Eastman Kodak were rather heavy.

No business was done in London in bar silver because of the continued lack of buying orders from the United States and, dealers said, because offices were open only a half day on Saturday. Silver futures in Montreal were mixed.

A little more selling of American securities from abroad was reported by brokers with foreign connections. There was also some liquidation during the past several sessions for income tax purposes.

The Italo-Ethiopian peace muddle continued to keep financial circles watchful and wary.

Commission house analysts were expecting considerable irregularity in the equities market. It was pointed out, though, that in each one of the past six years the pre-Christmas decline was culminated some time between December 17 and 21.

In these years reinvestment demand usually began to make itself felt during the latter part of the month.

PROFIT TAKERS Swarm Grain Pit

Chicago, Dec. 14 (AP)—Profit takers, attracted by yesterday's steep 5 cents a bushel jump in wheat prices, swarmed into the grain pits with selling orders today and the market wavered nervously.

Half of yesterday's advance was wiped out at times as prices fluctuated irregularly. December contracts displayed outstanding strength after opening steady and advanced about a cent a bushel to well above $1.02.

Both May and July, however, were weak, falling at times around two cents below the previous close.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, Dec. 14—More toys of steel construction will be sold this Christmas than ever before, according to reports received by the American Iron & Steel Institute.

The organization in a calculation yesterday indicated toy automobiles, velocipedes and scooters alone will require approximately 20,000 tons of steel while an additional but incalculable tonnage will be used to make toy trains, stoves, construction sets and numerous other articles.

Sheet and strip steel are the products most widely used by toy makers, the analysis said, although tin plate and black plate are close behind. Steel tubing, both seamless and welded and cast iron are also important raw materials for toys.

Final Quarter Estimates Appear

Estimates now circulating of final quarter corporation earnings indicate considerable improvement in per share net over the previous three months as well as the corresponding quarter of 1934.

The calculations promise the best statements from the liquor and automobile manufacturing and accessory companies. Distillers is expected to earn fourth-quarter net of $1 a share compared with 67 cents the preceding quarter and 36 cents last year.

Schenley is expected to earn $2.25 a share vs. $1.64 the September quarter and $1.56 the December quarter of 1934.

General Motors net is figured at 85 cents a share against 66 cents the previous three months and nothing for the common a year ago, while Chrysler profits are estimated at $1.50 a share vs. $1.04 and 3 cents; Briggs $1.10 against 43 cents and 15 cents; General Electric 32 cents contrasted with 20 cents and 18 cents; Westinghouse 90 cents vs. 96 cents and 18 cents; Union Carbide 82 cents vs. 69 cents and 76 cents; du Pont $1.75 vs. $1.45 and 57 cents and Nickel 40 cents vs. 50 cents and 27 cents.

Controlled Units Help to Central

New York Central Railroad's income and potential income from some of its subsidiaries and controlled units is beginning to appear.

To bolster Central's consolidated figures this year, Chicago River & Indiana Railroad, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Central, has declared a distribution of $3,000,000 out of accumulated funds. The last distribution of the road was $2,500,000 in 1929.

The Central controlled Pittsburgh & Lake Erie has reported net income equal to $3.03 a capital share for the first ten 1935 months, against $2.64 in the like 1934 period.

Central owns 50½ per cent of the P. & L. E. stock. This substantially covers the $2.50 annual dividend on the P. & L. E. shares.

Machine Tool Orders Index Off

As previously predicted by the National Machinery Tool Builders Association the index of machine tool orders for November declined from October, chiefly due to the downward trend in foreign orders.

Index for the past month, was 98.6, a decline of 4.3 point from the 102.9 in October. However, a gain of 46.2 points was registered over 52.4 in November, 1934.

Index of foreign orders declined 4.0 points from 23.4 in October to 19.4 in November. Foreign index figure for November last year was 9.3.

Domestic sales held about even with the preceding month, figure of 79.2 for November comparing with 79.5 in October and 43.1 in like 1934 month.

Your opportunity is the membership application blank on this page.

That is the key to more fun than you've ever had in your life.

It means access to a world of aeronautical information compiled as you want it by the Junior Birdmen of America. Much of this material has never been compiled before.

It takes the power of an organization now backed by 315,000 enthusiastic young members plus the co-operation of the United States Bureau of Air Commerce, pilots, government officials, business men and educators to present the 101 activities open to Junior Birdmen.

These include thorough courses of aviation study, air adventures told by famous pilots, model plane building and flying contests with cash prizes ranging from small sums to a thousand dollars; free airplane flights; theater rallies and free aeronautical shows; Pilot Polls, scrapbook, funnybone, essay and other contests; banquets; flight unit meetings; officers forums; races for the wing honor banner and extra events such as Navy day, Swap day and sea trips. Your gold wing pin with membership card is your ticket to all the above.

As the Junior Birdmen, now in its second year, grows, its members will have increasing opportunities to learn and to do. That is why you are urged to join now and give yourself a chance and in doing so further this great national, air-minded movement for America's supremacy in the skies.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

(Membership is open to all boys and girls 10 to 21 years of age, inclusive.)

I wish to join the Junior Birdmen of America. I inclose a ten-cent coin (well wrapped) for my membership materials.

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts
Department of Correction
National Industrial Recovery Project Mass. State P-12 Docket No. 4534.
NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed proposals under PWA Docket No. 4534 for furnishings and installing equipment for Clothing Shop, Metal Products Shop, Chair Shop, Brush and Broom Shop, Bag and Basket Shop, Warehouse and Administrative Offices, including Machinery, Wiring and Motors, Piping, Steel Shelving, Tables, Benches, Trucks, Tools, Galvanizing Equipment, Enamel Baking Oven, Spray Booths, Refuse Collecting System, Office Equipment including furniture and business record machines in Industrial Buildings A and D will be received by the Superintendent of the State Prison Colony at Norfolk, Massachusetts, until Monday, December 23, 1935, at 12:30 P. M., and at that time and place will be publicly opened and read. Bids must be made upon the Department's prescribed special form of equipment contract for projects financed and constructed under the terms of the National Industrial Recovery Act and Chapter 365 of the Massachusetts Acts of 1933, to which is attached and made a part thereof the Special Contract Provisions Revised June 7, 1934, and reprinted September 27, 1934, of the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works and the State Emergency Public Works Commission.

Attention is called to the fact that not less than the minimum wage rates prescribed by the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works must be paid on this project. Attention is called to the fact that a schedule of minimum wage rates as established for the work by the Commissioner of Labor and Industries under the provisions of Chapter 461 of the Acts of 1933 is annexed to the contract documents.

The office of the United States Employment Service designated by the Government for this project is the National Reemployment Service, Post Office Building, Norwood, Mass. Telephone Norwood 0884.

Specifications and contract forms may be obtained at the office of Fay, Spofford and Thorndike, Consulting Engineers, 44 School Street, Boston, Massachusetts. Contract drawings may be seen at the offices of Fay, Spofford and Thorndike, 44 School Street, Boston, Massachusetts, or may be obtained at that office upon payment of the sum of three ($3) dollars. Bids must be accompanied by a properly certified check on, or a certificate of deposit issued by, a responsible bank or trust company in the sum of not less than ten percent of the amount of the bid with a minimum of twenty-five dollars, payable to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Checks will be returned after the execution of the contract upon demand. A surety bond by an approved surety company will be required from successful bidders in an amount not less than the full amount of the contract. When required by the specifications bidders shall provide certificates of quality to accompany the proposals. No bidder may withdraw his bid for a period of thirty days after the date set for the opening thereof.

Bidders may submit proposals for any or all of the items listed in the proposal form and the right is reserved to reject any or all items or proposals, or to accept any item or proposal deemed best for the Commonwealth, and no award can be made without the approval of the State Engineer, P.W.A., and of the State Emergency Public Works Commission.

By MAURICE N. WINSLOW, Superintendent.
